ATTEMPT TO SLAY POLITICIAN FAILS; ARMSTRONG OFFICE ATTACKER DIES

Today

A Glad New Year. Praise Mr. Lee, Chinese. Do Women Brag? Yes. Peaceful Gandhi Threatens.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

ROSH HASHANAH, the Jewish New Year, began at sundown last night. It is the year 5,692 in the Jewish calendar. The Christian religion gives a different age to the earth. But inasmuch as science proves both wrong by many hundred millions of years, it is not a thing to quarrel about.

Rosh Hashanah is a happy day, bringing special services for the aged, the ill and the poor, in 91 well-managed Jewish institutions in one single city, gifts to the children, happiness for thousands all over the country.

BESTOW, PLEASE, an approving thought on William Lee, 26-year-old Chinese, who lives in Brooklyn. Three thugs surrounded Lee, commanding:

"Hand over your money."

Under such circumstances the proud Caucasian usually hands it over.

Lee hit one Caucasian thug on the nose, kicked the other in the shins, pushed the third into the gutter and ran. They overtook him, threw him down, kicked him in the head, stabbed him in the left side and in the back, and when he was unconscious, robbed him, getting $4 cash and a wrist watch. But Mr. Lee got the glory and set a good example to proud Caucasia.

MRS. ELEANOR PATTERSON, grandchild of Joseph Medill, large owner of the Chicago Tribune, chief editor of Hearst's Washington Herald, writes in Cosmopolitan Magazine that certain women brag more than men do. Cyrus H. K. Curtis gives two columns to Ida Tarbell and Anita Loos, and they contradict their literary sister.

THE QUESTION is not important. If women brag, it is because they have energy and ambition. Bragging in youth becomes accomplishment later. Wolfe bragged that he would take Quebec. He did. Shakespeare bragged that mentioning a name in his sonnet would make that name immortal. It did. And so with Ronsard.

More interesting than the bragging discussion is the Anita Loos statement:

"Women abroad have charm, but no vitality. Here we have loads of vitality and no charm. I think that's just fine."

GANDHI, THE "peaceful one," bound for England, lands at Marseilles with the not very peaceful remark that the British government in such deep trouble must necessarily yield to his demands. If it does not yield, says he, there will be a new boycott and greater bloodshed.

But the Mahatma may be disappointed. Englishmen possess a quality that sometimes disappoints those that expect them to back down.

And if there is increased bloodshed, it will be largely Hindu blood, of whom there are 300,000,000 in India, against 100,000 British forces.

Also Gandhi should not forget the sixty odd million Mohammedans that always enjoy shedding Hindu blood.

BELIZE, CAPITAL of British Honduras, was struck by a tropical hurricane yesterday, buildings wrecked, 200 killed. The same hurricane, typhoon, gale or cyclone, call it what you will, or another like it, struck Porto Rico, killed one, taking roofs from 200 houses in San Juan.

Danger in these tropical hurricanes consists in the whirling power of the cyclone, which usually moves slowly, about 15 miles an hour over land or water.

Fliers and steamers easily escape by turning from their path.

NO HOPE SEEMS left for the brave Pacific fliers, Moyle and Allen. They may be hanging to the wreckage of their plane somewhere on the Pacific, but that is a faint hope, with a much fainter chance of finding them, as their flight was not in the steamship lane.

If the worst happens they will take their place among courageous pioneers.

And in a hundred years when all the 1,600,000,000 now on earth will be dead, they will be glad they attempted the flight.

WISCONSIN IS impressed by the fall of two gigantic meteors, one described as "big as a house," into Lake Winnebago with a loud splash and much steam, the other into Lake Michigan. That was one meteor for each of the La Follette boys, the Governor and the Senator of Wisconsin.

Perhaps the old Senator La Follette sent them down from where he now is, up above. He did things as startling in politics.

SENATOR BORAH, of Idaho, learns that a "Borah for President" club has started in Virginia and is pleased "to learn that I have such good friends down in the Old Dominion."

But Senator Borah and the Old Dominion have probably no doubt that the nominee's name will begin with H and not B.

MEN ARE STILL barbarians, where religious controversies are concerned. At Jonesboro, Ark., martial law is needed because the Rev. Jeffers, evangelist, accuses the pastor of the First Baptist Church of unbecoming conduct.

Five thousand prayerful persons crowded the revival tent to hear more about that, while national guardsmen with fixed bayonets stood outside. The evangelist said:

"I get my sermons from God, not the Governor or any one else."

And he announces that martial law won't influence him.

MURIEL VANDERBILT PHELPS

The Vanderbilt heiress, in her second marriage yesterday, became the bride of Henry D. Phelps, bond salesman, in a civil ceremony at her mother's estate, Manhasset, N. Y. She recently divorced Frederic C. Church, Harvard football star.

POLITE GUNMAN ROBS 2 STORES

Nonchalant and polite, a Negro robber, walked into an A & P grocery at 1935 Murray avenue this morning, held up the manager, his assistant and two customers and escaped with $40.

While police were scouring the district the same Negro flourishing a revolver, stepped through the doorway of a P. H. Butler store at 4203 Murray avenue walked away with $45 after assuring the manager, and two clerks that:

"Everything's all right. Just keep quiet two minutes."

J. K. Hughes, manager, and Helen Wansley, of 6916 Chaucer street, clerk, were standing in front of the cash register talking to two women customers when the Negro entered.

Pointing the gun, the Negro said:

"Don't say a word."

He opened the register, picked out all the bills, and said:

"Where's the rest?"

Assured they had no more money he told the occupants to wait five minutes.

As he passed out the door he said:

"Thanks."

In the Butler store were Thomas Johnston, manager, of 820 Third street, West Homestead, his daughter, Janet, 18, and J. W. Jack, of Leechburg, manager in the meat department. Janet raised her hands in the air and the robber said:

"Don't do that. Keep 'em down."

FEAR LEBRIX KILLED IN AIR CRASH

Plane Bearing Famed French Flier Falls in Russia; Three Men Believed Dead

International News Service.

MOSCOW, Sept. 12.—Joseph Lebrix, one of France's premier airmen, and two companions were feared to have been killed today when the plane in which they were attempting a nonstop flight from Paris to Tokio, crashed near Ufa, in the Ural Mountains.

Two bodies were found near the crash reports from Ufa said, but they had not been definitely identified.

Lebrix's companions were Marcel Doret and Rene Mesmin. The trio hopped from Paris yesterday on an attempt to set a new long distance flight record by breaking the record recently established by the American airmen, Russell Boardman and John Polando, on their flight from New York to Istanbul, Turkey.

The Frenchmen were flying the plane Hypen II, a single-motored craft. They had passed over Moscow late last night, heading toward Kazan. Clear weather was reported on their route at that time.

SNIPERS FIGHT MINE GUARDS

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Sept. 12.—(AP.)—Mine guards clashed with a group of snipers who attacked them early today in the hills near here.

The attackers were put to flight after a quarter of an hour of firing. Whether there were casualties in their ranks could not be learned. Monroe Hamilton, 35, a guard, was wounded.

The battle followed an attack by snipers upon the plant of the Connellsville By-Product Company, near here. State police and every available county officer were rushed to the scene when news of the fight was telephoned to Morgantown.

Guards reported intermittent sniping early last night from a hillside. The firing increased and then pistols began barking from a nearby highway. Guards put out the lights about the mine tipple and brought machine guns and tear bombs into play.

Nonunion miners are employed in the plant, owned by the J. A. Paisley interests of Cleveland.

Lillian Walker Sues To Cut Marital Tie

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—(AP.)—Lillian Walker, an all but forgotten queen of the movies of 20 years ago, now a farmer-woman of Saratoga, N. Y., has begun suit for divorce, the Daily News says, from Charles E. Hanson, real estate operator. Her marriage became public in 1929, the paper said, although it took place a score of years ago. In 1929 she sued him for separation and obtained $250 a month alimony.

MAYOR CHARLES H. KLINE AT MICROPHONE . . . COMMISSIONER ARMSTRONG NEARBY

His Honor, the Mayor, removing any doubt as to whom credit goes in his speech yesterday at the City-County Airport dedication ceremonies. He also mentioned Commissioner Babcock, who is not a candidate for re-election. Last night the Mayor followed up his action by telling First Ward workers to support Armstrong as well as James J. Coyne.

ESTEP INJURED BY AUTO

Congressman Harry A. Estep, chairman of the Armstrong campaign committee, was in St. Joseph's Hospital today, a victim of an accident last night.

At the hospital it was reported that he declined to discuss the mishap. His condition was reported as not serious.

At the conclusion of Armstrong's speech at a rally in Kriger Hall, Arlington avenue, it was announced that Estep, who was scheduled to speak, was in St. Joseph's Hospital as a result of being injured by an automobile near the G. B. U. Hall, Brownsville road, Carrick. Estep was en route to the meeting when struck.

TOKIO, Sept. 12.—(INS.)—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh, scheduled to leave Tokio this afternoon on the first leg of their flight to China, postponed their departure because of unfavorable winds.

Kline for Armstrong, He Tells First Ward

Coyne Scores Gain Through Support Of Veroskey

By MARK SHIELDS

Mayor Kline is for County Commissioner Armstrong in the First Ward, at least.

He told a meeting of workers from the ward in City Hall last night that they not only should support Senator James J. Coyne as a Commissioner candidate, but should also vote for Armstrong. The leader of this ward is Police Supt. Peter P. Walsh, long-time friend of Armstrong, who is generally credited with getting Walsh his place in the Kline cabinet.

The political picture in this ward in its scrambled condition is illustrative of the confused condition throughout the county and city in the fight for county office and City Council.

Walsh's son, Paul, is running for constable against the incumbent, Jack Schneider, follower of Coyne, and the two are having a bitter fight. Presumably friends of Armstrong in the ward will vote for young Walsh, which may not make the adherents of Schneider enthusiastic for Armstrong, despite the Mayor's statement.

Coyne has made some gains outside of Pittsburgh through a re-

Registrars Balking Would-Be Repeaters

Every tax receipt presented for registration today will be stamped with the letter R in a circle to prevent repeating. Rubber stamps were sent out last night by John K. Morrow, chairman of the Registration Commissioners, to every registration board in the city, with instructions to registrars to stamp the receipts. The system will prevent a repeater from using the same receipt to register in more than one district.

City Registration Offices Open Till 11

All city registration places were to be open from 8 to 11 a. m. and 5 to 11 p. m., daylight saving time, today.

The Delinquent Tax Office was to remain open until 11 p. m. to give persons who have not yet paid their taxes, without which they cannot register, an opportunity to do so, Harry B. Bunting, chief clerk there, said.

Dollars Mark 57th Year of Marriage

SAN RAFAEL, Cal., Sept. 12.—(AP.)—Capt. Robert Dollar, steamship magnate, and Mrs. Dollar, observed their fifty-seventh wedding anniversary informally at their home here.

Because of Capt. Dollar's advanced age—he is 87—and his recent illness, the day was passed quietly. A few friends and relatives called.

FOUR POLICE EJECTED IN HILL POLLING PLACE BATTLE

One death and an attempted murder were added today to the violence and disorders which for weeks have been a part of the Republican "Organization's" election activity.

Walter Goliat, 30, of 2530 Penn avenue, died in West Penn Hospital today from a fractured skull incurred as he fled from the Oakland headquarters of County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong on Labor Day morning after he and seven other men had raided the place, slugged one man, terrorized several others and emptied their revolvers into the walls and windows.

A sniper, unapprehended, last night, fired upon an automobile carrying three supporters of P. F. Riley, candidate for alderman in the Seventeenth Ward, to a political meeting in Riley's home, 49 South Eleventh street.

KLINE CANDIDATE

Riley is supported by Mayor Charles H. Kline and State Senator James J. Coyne in his effort to replace John P. Kearcher, Armstrong-backed incumbent.

Riley followers charged that the sniper had fired on the car, believing it to contain the candidate and Dr. W. A. Renee, 1902 East Carson street, one of his most active supporters. They declared it was an attempt to assassinate Dr. Renee.

Several of the men attending the Riley meeting went to the South Side Police Station, where, they said, they reported the shooting to Inspector Dennis Hennessey, an Armstrong appointee. They charge that he ignored their complaint. There was no record of the shooting on the South Side police docket when it was inspected this morning.

FIRST FATALITY

Goliat's death was the first fatality of a campaign which has mingled gun play with oratory and clubs and bricks with the candidates' literature. He was struck on the head by a brick hurled by an Armstrong supporter as Goliat fled from the headquarters at 3604 Fifth avenue after the raid.

William McGraw, 22, of 237 Romeo street, who, police said, admitted throwing the brick, was taken into custody by homicide squad detectives today. He had been arrested when he identified Goliat in the hospital.

Two days before the raid Goliat had been arrested by constables

HUGE VOTE LOSS FOUGHT IN SUIT

BULLETIN.

The County Commissioners shortly before noon today filed a petition in Common Pleas Court asking that the Registration Commission be ordered to turn over any registration books which the County Commissioners desire to inspect, at noon, Sunday, which, the petition claims, is the legal hour for the Registration Board to complete their work on the records.

Judge Swearingen refused to grant the order.

At the same time Judge Macfarlane ruled against an injunction asked by a taxpayer to prevent the Registration Commission from striking thousands of names from the voting lists. He instructed the commission to give a public hearing—"wherever possible"—to the persons whose names are to be stricken from the books upon evidence of fraud.

The final registration day of the most fraud-filled election Allegheny County and Pittsburgh have witnessed in many years, dawned today as the Registration Commission, swamped by an avalanche of evidence of fraud and irregularity in assessment and registration records, prepared to strike thousands of names from Tuesday's voting lists.

The registration places had been opened less than two hours when a taxpayer's suit was filed against the Registration Commission to prevent "wholesale slashing" of bonefide voters from lists in which evidence of fraud is discovered.

HEARING BEGINS

Hearing of the case started immediately before Judges James R. Macfarlane, James M. Swearingen and Elder W. Marshall. The law firm of Reed, Smith, Shaw & McClay and Assistant City Solicitor Benjamin L. Steinberg represented Lester Grupp, the taxpayer who started the action.

Gen. Churchill B. Mehard, counsel for the Registration Commission, told the court the commission was taking every precaution to protect the legitimate voter and that its action would be direct entirely against "phantom voters" and "repeaters."

As the Registration Commission's investigators scanned long lists of alleged "phantom voters" and "repeaters," it became known that hundreds, perhaps thousands, of bonafide voters have been deprived of their right to the ballot through failure of the Board for Revision and Assessment of Taxes to transcribe their names onto the records.

An hour after registration started, two Negroes were arrested in the Third Ward and brought into the Registration Commission office charged with attempting to register under assumed names. One was arrested by state troppers, the other by commission investigators.

FLOOD OF PROTESTS

Protests from Dormont, Mt. Lebanon, Wilkinsburg, Bellevue and other places where a heavy Independent vote is expected, showed scores of persons have already discovered their names recorded by borough register-asses-

Mrs. Black on Air In Dope Parley Talk

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—A picture revealing events at the recent international narcotic conference held under the auspices of the League of Nations at Geneva was to be given by Mrs Winifred Black in a broadcast over an N. B. C. coast-to-coast network today, from 3 to 3:15 p. m. Pittsburgh time.

Mrs. Black, famous writer for the Hearst newspapers and a leader in the campaign for world-wide control of the manufacture and sale of dope, was an American delegate and observer at the narcotic conference. She returned Thursday from Geneva.

Woman Raid Victim Scores Kline 'Machine' Methods

The city and county Republican organizations became so offensive that she no longer could support candidates backed by Mayor Charles H. Kline and County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong, Mrs. Dorothy Steinour, Independent Republican worker arrested by East End police Thursday, told an audience in the independent headquarters, 5901 Penn avenue, last night.

She was arrested when police raided a house across the street from the East End Police Station, but was discharged in East End Police Court yesterday. She charged a "frame-up."

Speaking last night, she said:

"It only shows to what extremes this Republican machine is going in its efforts to win the election by hook or crook. I have been a political worker for many years, but I have never seen anything that approached the corrupt methods of the present organization. After being a Regular Republican organization worker from 1920 until 1930, I found that I could no longer support the candidates indorsed by that body."

Autoist Sought for Killing Man in Traffic Dispute

A blow struck by an unidentified man seated in an automobile proved fatal today to Carl Wagner, 35, a painter, of 5913 Broad street. He died in Pittsburgh Hospital.

Jarred from his feet by the blow, Wagner's head struck a steel manhole cover, fracturing his skull.

A city-wide search is in progress for the assailant.

Witnesses said Wagner, on Monday night, reprimanded the autoist for driving too close to him at the intersection of North St. Clair and Broad streets. There was an argument and then the motorist struck Wagner. Wagner fell.

Rumors that politics were involved in the argument were denied by witnesses.

11 American Jesuits Dead in Hurricane

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 12 — (AP) — The eleven members of the Missouri province of the Society of Jesus killed in the Belize hurricane included six priests, four scholastics (not yet ordained priests), and one Jesuit brother. They all studied at various times at St. Louis University here.

The dead priests' names, telegraphed to St. Louis University last night by Bishop Joseph Murphy, a Jesuit in charge of Catholic work in British Honduras, are:

The Rev. William Tracy, St. Louis; Richard Koch, University City, Mo.; a scholastic, the Rev. Bernard A. Nee, Buffalo, N. Y.; the Rev. William Ferris, a native of Ireland; the Rev. Two Hurricanes Sweep Toward Mexican Shores

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 12 (AP.)—Mexico was menaced today by two hurricanes, one sweeping across the gulf toward the southeastern coast and the other coming in from the Pacific in the direction of the southwest states.

The government meteorological observatory issued a warning that the disturbances were exerting great force and were capable of causing heavy damage if they struck inhabited sections. The Pacific storm was expected to hit somewhere between the states of Sinaloa and Guerrero.

Two persons were known to have lost their lives and at least a score injured, but property damage was heavy. Hundreds of houses were wrecked or unroofed by the 100-mile-an-hour gale.

ported decision of M. J. Vernoky, Brandon leader, to support the Senator as well as Armstrong. Until yesterday Coyne had been counting the support of Vernoky's county purchasing agent as not expecting it to be turned to Senator William D. Mansfield.

How far reaching the Vernoky move will be in the district up the Monongahela is disputed. In Homestead Burgess John Cavalcanti, bitter enemy of Coyne, shows no sign of weakening in his determination to back Armstrong and Mansfield, though Coyne is attempting to break into Homestead through his own organization.

One Eighth Ward worker, usually a follower of the Mayor, said yesterday that he was for Armstrong and Mansfield for his ticket and had heard nothing to change his determination. This is the bulwark of City Treasurer Roy D. Schooley, enemy both of Coyne, but Schooley has been talking Armstrong and Coyne and it is thought that will be the ticket of the district on election day.

COUNCIL KLINE'S WORRY

Conflicting word comes from the Mayor's office as to whether or not he participated on the Mayor's ticket to polish the controversy. It now stands the court has ordered that candidates be permitted to make the switch [illegible] Where Armistice is effective, the Mayor is [illegible] hope that the Commissioner will not throw votes to the independent [illegible] ticket.

It is certain that there will be no matter what the verbal orders are, [illegible] plump for Coyne. In Ward Armstrong is expected to have the edge and there is no [illegible] evidence of any hard-and-fast agreement which would mean an even exchange of votes.

BOTHERED BY PROBE

There is that thousands of votes may be stricken from the registration books here included with the Coyne and Armstrong camps which may bring something approaching a political defeat for both. Each leader is interested [illegible] to have any name in that [illegible] wrecked by [illegible] of perfecting a mile-a-minute pair.

real agreement's made greater by the numerous fights for smaller office in various wards where Armstrong followers are arrayed against factions of the Mayor and Coyne.

Mansfield, in an address to about 650 volunteer firemen last night in his headquarters in William Penn Hotel, hinted that Pittsburgh registration was not as large as it might be. He again urged his audience to vote for another candidate after voting for him, but did not presume to select that candidate for them.

"I examine the records of the other candidates," he said, "then select the one you wish to have work with me."

PROBE OUSTING OF 3 TEACHERS

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Sept. 12.—Alumni of Morgantown High School formed a permanent organization last night and provided for the appointment of a committee to investigate circumstances which led to the Board of Education placing three faculty members on leaves of absence.

Sentiment regarding the temporary ousting of Principal J. T. West, Miss Blanche Garfield and Miss Esther Williams, of the faculty, on complaints regarding their conduct made before the board by three janitors, drifted into more quiet channels with growing support for the action of the board.

250,000 CANS GIVEN TO AID NEEDY HERE

Operations Speed as Mills, Refining Company Assist In Move to Feed Hungry

With the donation of material for a quarter million cans by the American Sheet & Tin Plate Company, the McKeesport Tin Plate Company and the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation, operations by the Surplus for the Needy Committee were going ahead rapidly.

The American Can Company will manufacture the tin receptacles. The Gulf Refining Company has donated 5,000 gallons of gasoline for operating trucks in the work.

An appeal has been sounded to members of junior leagues to aid in the collection of the vegetables and fruit from farmers of the district.

Attorney Harry J. Miller, chairman of the committee, said today that a special appeal was being made for contributions of money to buy sugar and ingredients.

The donation of all coats and aprons to be used by those engaged in the canning operations has been made by the American Coat and Apron Company.

Radio stations KDKA and WCAE have offered the committee the use of their facilities for broadcasting appeals.

Harry R. Hosick of the Potter Title & Trust Company has been named treasurer.

The Pittsburgh Chapter American Red Cross intent on diverting all available surplus foodstuffs to the relief of needy families, has formed a food preserving committee under the leadership of Mrs. A. I. Humphrey. Mrs. C. B. Ellis and Mrs. George Phelps Rose have been named vice-chairman.

The movement is expected to be taken up in many boroughs and townships. Civic clubs, church societies and other women's groups are invited to lend their aid.

It is the plan of the committee to furnish more than 5,000 needy families of the Pittsburgh district with five cans of vegetables each week over a period of 32 weeks.

Ballot Numbers Must Be Taken Off by Voters

Voters and election board officers have been warned that the serial number with the initial of the political party on the band of each ballot in the perforated triangle at the upper left corner must be removed by the voter before the ballot is deposited in the box or the ballot will be voided when the count is taken.

The number was ordered by a recent act of the Legislature to prevent chain voting and repeating through the use of other than official ballots and to prevent the deposit and counting of ballots furnished by persons other than the official printer.

GIGANTIC VOTE THEFT PLOT CHARGED

McGovern and Other Independents Appeal to Voters to Oust Machine

Allegheny County faces a gigantic plot to steal the election, nullify the votes of decent and honest citizens and steal the county government, according to County Commissioner C. C. McGovern, candidate for re-election, speaking at a meeting last night in Cotaopolis High School. He said:

"Sufficient evidence has been adduced to show that fraudulent assessments and registrations are connected with the political organizations headed by County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong."

Speaking in the same vein, John W. Vickerman, president of the State Adult Bible Class Federation and former member of the Legislature, stated at a meeting yesterday in Independent Republican headquarters:

"I want to issue a challenge to every minister, church member and members of the Bible classes of the county. You believe in good government, you preach and teach good citizenship and civic righteousness during the year; now is the time to put into practice what we have been teaching and preaching.

"Never in the history of Allegheny County was there such an opportunity to strike a hard blow at corrupt politics as now by electing officials who believe in honest government.

Former State Senator Cadwallader M. Barr, manager of the Independent Republican campaign, said further:

"I have written to every minister in Allegheny County, asking him to take cognizance of this rotten condition."

William D. Grimes, candidate for Judge of Common Pleas Court, addressing a meeting yesterday in North Side Independent Republican headquarters, said:

"This campaign in Allegheny County is far reaching. The success of the Independent Republican ticket here will be a welcome sound, and its echoes will ring within the corridors of the national Capitol.

Concerning the charge of an attempt to steal the election, McGovern said:

"The responsibility cannot be laid to the door of the petty election crook who is promised a parole or a suspended sentence if caught, but to those in control of the election machinery, particularly the County Commissioners' office and to candidates for County Commissioner who stand ready and willing to profit by this despicable form of thievery which would rob decent men and women of their sacred right of franchise.

"The inception of this plot began when the Board for the Assessments and Revision of Taxes, controlled by County Commissioner Armstrong, made assessments in the city of Pittsburgh which actually exceeded the population as recorded in the last Federal census, admittedly accurate.

POLITICAL RAID VICTIM DIES

from the Sixth Ward for alleged attacks on Armstrong supporters there.

He was accused of threatening Armstrong adherents with death if they attempted to register.

Judge James H. Gray released him under $26,000 bail.

The morning of the Oakland raid, Goliat was taken to the hospital by Ben Manuel, 23, of 2535 Mulberry way, and Mat Catanio, 26, of 2615 Mulberry way. All three were arrested there.

Even as Goliat died, a detail of 50 state police moved into the city to guard registration places as they prepared to open for the third and final day of the voters' enrollment.

Superintendent of Police Peter P. Walsh assigned 100 patrolmen and motorcycle officers to the registration places today, concentrating them in the wards where trouble was expected, between rival factions of the Republican party, particularly in the Hill, Strip and downtown districts.

The first violence of the day came at Letsche School, Bedford avenue near Mercer street, the scene of disorder and violence on both previous registration days.

A near-riot broke out there when the registration board ordered four Negro policemen ejected from the building.

State troopers arrived as the mobs threatened to assume serious proportions, quelled the disorder and instructed the policemen to keep out of the registration place during the remainder of the day.

Fifteen of the 50 state police were being held at the Registration Commission offices ready to be dispatched to any part of the city where disorder was reported.

The other 35 were divided into cruising patrols and assigned to strategic points, easily accessible to "organization" wards where a last-minute rush to throw great numbers of illegal voters onto the registration lists was expected.

LIBERTYVILLE, Ill., Sept. 12 (AP.)—Beatrice Kirk, 22, daughter of Walter R. Kirk, wealthy Lake Forest soap manufacturer and prominent in society along Chicago's North Shore, was arrested three times within 20 minutes for speeding.

sors have not reached the assessment lists in the tax board offices.

Other developments today were:

1—The Registration Commission ordered 25 rubber stamps with the imprint "Stricken Off by Registration Commission September 14," giving an intimation of the great number of names the members expect to strike from the vote lists as illegal.

2—The Bar Association's Committee on Election Frauds was found to be considering filing informations against a score or more of politicians in whose lists of "wholesale" tax receipts, evidences of fraud have been discovered.

3—Data which the Registration Commission has compiled from the assessment books will be placed at the polls today as a check against further frauds.

4—The Registration Commission, immediately at the close of the registration places tonight, will start one of the most thorough inspections that has ever been given registration lists, with its entire office and investigating forces on duty Saturday night, Sunday and Monday.

5—Announcement by the Registration Commission that more than 42,500 tax receipts were obtained from the Treasurer's office and probably another 30,000 from the Delinquent Tax office on "wholesale" orders presented by political leaders.

6—The Bar Association Committee revealed it had studied alleged forgeries on the "wholesale" tax list, uncovered this week by investigators, and was considering court action.

TAX ORDER TRAFFIC

The traffic in "wholesale" tax orders, the practice of one person presenting a number of signed orders authorizing him to pay for and obtain the purchasers' tax receipts, is declared to be [illegible] than in any other section in Allegheny County. The indications this year is expected to set a new high with a total well over 200,000.

Fifteen politicians, for instance, obtained and paid for 33,790 tax receipts. Six of them obtained 20,795.

Political followers of State Senator James J. Coyne's candidacy for County Commissioner were the heaviest buyers, four of his closest associations procuring 12,236 tax receipts. Other supporters purchased smaller amounts.

LARGEST BUYERS

James E. Rooney, assistant Chief Clerk in the County Commissioner's office and a supporter of County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong, obtained 1,320 receipts, mostly for Armstrong's home ward, the Seventeenth.

Among the largest buyers were Attorney Howard Speer, Fourth Ward Republican chairman, with 6,076; P. J. O'Malley of the Second Ward with 2,800; Thomas Coyne, with 1,960, and Gus Greenler, former Hill lottery czar, with 1,400. All are Coyne adherents.

Edward J. Sullivan, a supporter of Congressman P. J. Sullivan, supporting Armstrong in the Sixth Ward, obtained 3,400, and Alderman John J. Verona, supporting Coyne and Armstrong, together, got 3,220 in the Third Ward.

Fred Denzler, a city property assessor, and J. Scott Morgan, former registration commissioner, were also heavy purchasers, with 2,708 and 1,600 respectively.

All of these purchases were made in the County Treasurer's office and nearly all of the buyers obtained additional receipts in "wholesale" lots from the delinquent tax office.

Heat Wave Brings Death And Season Records

By Associated Press

A late summer heat wave brought torrid blasts which had left during the last 24 hours records in many districts.

While relief was felt in the Northwest where yesterday the mercury climbed to 106 in Huron, S. D., and Moorhead, Minn., only the rarest possibility of cooler temperatures was predicted for the central and eastern states.

The hottest spot was Phoenix where the temperature reached 104 degrees. It was 98 in Marquette, Mich., Albany, N. Y., Baltimore and Philadelphia. As far north as Montreal and Toronto, it felt temperatures of 90.

There were three deaths in Wisconsin caused by the heat, two in Michigan and one in Pennsylvania, six prostrations in Maryland, one in Pennsylvania and three in Washington, D. C.

The temperature climbed to 95, the highest since 1856 for September 11 in New York City, which suffered its hottest day of the summer. A 98 broke Baltimore's 50-year record, while Des Moines's 95 set a new record for September 11.

In many cities of Massachusetts, in Madison, Wis., Omaha, Neb., and Winona, Minn., the streets were clogged because of the heat. Bathing beaches were reopened in many sections, officials of Chicago estimated more than a million sought relief in Lake Michigan.

WIFE IN YACHT MYSTERY FREED

NEW YORK Sept. 12.—(AP)—Her story of a piratical attack on a yacht believed by officials, Mrs. Benjamin P. Collings was back at her home in Stamford, Conn., today. She had been questioned two days about the disappearance of her husband from their cabin cruiser Penguin, on Long Island Sound.

Police today pressed a search for his body, and for two men who Mrs. Collings said threw him overboard and later attacked her. District Attorney Elvin N. Edwards of Nassau County, ordering Mrs. Collings' release, said:

"I believe her story of what transpired on the little boat, fantastic as it may seem. She is not under suspicion."

In Long Island Sound, Coast Guard patrol boats, several police launches and two airplanes from the New York police base were covering every cove. Long Island steamer captains were asked to watch for the body.

Police broadcast a general alarm for two men, one about 50, the other about 18, who, according to Mrs. Collings, took her off the boat after drowning her husband.

Cloonan said each machine was to be unsealed, inspected and then resealed before delivery to the polls Tuesday morning.

He took the action, he said, on orders of County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong, as a result of representations made by Commissioner Charles C. McGovern that he wanted someone whom he would designate to inspect the counters on the machines before their delivery.

The machines will be used in the third class cities and in four wards of Pittsburgh. About 50 will be held in reserve for emergencies.

ARGUMENT SET ON POOR BOARD

Arguments for refusal of a supersedeas and an appeal for permission for the board of visitors named by Judge James H. Gray to investigate the affairs of the Directors of the Poor, will be presented before Judge Thomas J. Baldridge of Superior Court in Hollidaysburg Monday by Attorney John Gilfillin, representing K. William Schuchman, instigator of the probe.

Schuchman contends if there is nothing to conceal, there should be no objection to the three visitors. Attorneys E. H. Wicks, G. M. McDonald and Paul E. Hutchinson, making an investigation of the board's affairs. This would be frustrated for the present at least if the court granted the supersedeas.

Attorney Wicks said today that the board of visitors is making some preliminary investigations of the Poor Board's affairs and that if it is desired, the visitors will be represented at the hearing before Judge Baldridge. He said the board of visitors will continue its work unless prevented by court action.

FLAGS TRAIN, AVERTS CRASH

A railroad yardmaster's alertness prevented a Baltimore and Ohio Railroad passenger train from crashing into a truck which had plunged onto the tracks near Second avenue and Bates street late last night.

The truck, parked in Ethel street, ran down the street driverless and plunged 25 feet onto the tracks, it was reported. M. E. Wynn, of 337 Collart square, general yardmaster of the Monongahela Connecting Railroad, en route home from work, learned of the accident from two boys.

Hastening to the scene and knowing that a passenger train was due, Wynn climbed a pole in time to see the train backing from the station. He ran back to the truck and flagged down the train with a newspaper within 100 feet of the wreckage, he said.

Throngs Hear New Airport Called Country's Finest At Dedication Fete

More than 75,000 persons from all sections of Western Pennsylvania had a new conception of aviation today following attendance at dedicatory exercises yesterday of the new $3,500,000 City County Airport.

While roads were jammed for miles around with cars of visitors to the new asphalt surfaced field, Army fliers stunted, planes zoomed, roared and maneuvered, and county and city political leaders sang the praises of one another while the port was dedicated officially.

Only one accident marred the day. A two-seater Argo biplane piloted by W. B. Pelon, of New Cumberland, W. Va., with V. S. Jackson, of Weirton, W. Va., as a passenger, crashed into a city automobile and motorcycle as the plane maneuvered to the field. The automobile was assigned to Dr. Daniel E. Sable, chief surgeon of the City Public Safety Department. Dr. W. S. Pettrour, Dr. Thomas Clark and a Mercy Hospital nurse, occupants, were badly bruised, but after receiving treatment, returned to duty as first aid attaches.

"FINEST AIRPORT"

James Francis Burke, national counsel for the Republican party, made the formal speech of dedication. In his talk, broadcast over Station KDKA, Burke paid tribute to the Board of Allegheny County Commissioners for their foresight of aviation activity.

He said:

"This airport, when completed, will be the finest in the country. In its present shape it is as good as any. Pittsburgh and Allegheny County were confronted by mammoth difficulties in building this port. These difficulties included problems of typography, geography, and atmospherics. But the County officials and engineers have overcome all these."

Chairman Joseph G. Armstrong, master of ceremonies, said the board was "airminded" and considered the new port a "thing of pride."

KLINE LAUDS ARMSTRONG

Following an inspection trip over the field in a big tri-motored plane, Armstrong said:

"I have taken one trip to New York. Now I'm not going to fool with railroads when I'm in a big hurry."

Senator James J. Davis, lauding the project, declared:

"I have landed at most of the principal airports in this country. There is nothing to equal this."

Mayor Charles H. Kline paid tribute to Armstrong.

He said:

"The credit goes to the Board of County Commissioners. The real working of it all is due to that man, that giant of initiative, that giant of improvements, Joseph G. Armstrong. The other man to whom credit is due is one who is not a candidate for re-election, E. V. Babcock."

In Mayfair —With— Patricia Pitt

In the new show ring just erected on the turf polo field in front of the Pittsburgh Hunt Club, the annual horse show of the Pittsburgh Hunt opened yesterday afternoon and will close tonight.

The grandstand, built on the hillside overlooking the ring, was colorful with gowns of spectators. Gay booths where refreshments are sold have been erected near the ring, centered by the judges' stand shaded by vividly striped umbrellas.

From their car Mrs. Scott Burke and Mrs. James Francis Burke were watching the classes yesterday afternoon.

Riding In Show

Mrs. Scott Burke looked cool in a pink crepe tailored frock and a smart white knitted turban, and Mrs. Burke in a white pique costume having large blue coin dots and a wide-brimmed white leghorn hat, banded in blue.

Mrs. Francis Burke Rodgers was in riding clothes, and so were young Nancy and Isabel Patterson, whom I saw in the grandstand early in the afternoon.

Chatting with friends was Frances Forsyth who wore a smart autumnal costume. She chose a suit of beige wool crepe having epaulette insets of pony skin, and a smart brown felt hat in the Empress Eugenie mode.

Mrs. W. A. Irvin was entertaining the Herbert Whites in her box, and the E. A. Dieboldts had as their guests the F. G. Bannerots. Mrs. Bannerot wore blue crepe and a large white sports hat.

A smart blue and white linen spectator frock was worn by Mrs. Gordon C. King, with a white straw hat to complete her costume. Her young son, Gordon C. King, Jr., was one of the riders.

The James Henrys and the David P. Bannerots were in the Diebold box. Nearby was Mrs. David I. McCahill, in a brown and green redingote costume, with the frock of pale green crepe and her coat of brown crepe. Her hat was of brown felt.

Young Virginia Murphy looked very smart in a bottle green crepe frock having collar and cuffs of white pique. Her hat was of brown felt in the Eugenie mode. With her was Jean Miller in a blue and white frock and turban to match.

Spectator Costumes

The Steitz sisters, Mary and Anne, were engrossed spectators. Mary chose a navy blue wool crepe dress and a navy blue Empress Eugenie felt hat, and Anne wore a pale blue crepe dress having a pleated peplum, and a deep band of pleating below the knees. She chose a jaunty blue Empress Eugenie felt hat to complete her costume.

Near the ringside were Betty Emery in a blue sleeveless silk meshknit dress and a blue straw hat, and Edna Pearson, in a buttercup yellow boucle suit and a brown felt Empress Eugenie hat. Others I noticed were Charlotte Emery in powder blue crepe, and Bettie Brooks, in a navy blue wool crepe jacket and a yellow crepe dress with which she wore a yellow faille turban.

Mrs. H. C. Bughman was among the spectators at the ringside late in the afternoon, wearing a blue shantung suit with a matching crepe hat. And I saw Louise Evans, in yellow crepe with a most becoming black Empress Eugene hat. Mary Kuhn, after a morning of golf at the Pittsburgh Field Club, where she and Barbara Warmcastle played off the championship, was in the grandstand later in the day wearing a sports frock of rose and coral boucle with a black felt plumed hat. Mrs. R. Kent Hanson was attractive in a blue and white printed crepe dress with a navy blue felt hat.

Summer Frocks

Seated in a car parked at the ringside were Marion Black, in rose boucle striped with black and white, and a brown Empress Eugene hat; Esther Smith, in a blue and white chalk print crepe with a blue turban; Louise McKee, in black and white chalk print, with a pleated peplum at the hipline and a black felt hat, and Margaret McKee, who chose an afternoon dress of paddy green crepe with a wide brimmed green straw hat.

Lucille Todd, strolling about the ring, wore white boucle with a white turban. Mrs. George H. Wittmer III, in her car, had chosen a knitted ensemble, having a rust-colored skirt, and lemon yellow blouse, with which she wore a brown turban. In the grandstand was Dorothy Slack, in white crepe, and arriving late was Louise Reed, charming in a crepe frock in powder and navy blue zig-zag stripes, with a navy blue felt hat.

Home Department of Congress At First Meeting of Year Addressed by Stylist

It isn't the amount a woman spends on clothes, it's cultivating a dress sense that makes for smartness, Elsie Lichenstul told the home department of the Congress of Clubs yesterday. It was a delightfully informative and informal talk that the KDKA stylist gave on "Life and Fashions Abroad." First she took her audience over the cruise which she made this summer—life on shipboard; Madiera, "the most charming spot in the world"; Algiers, "Arabian Nights Come to Life"; Spain, where she found no one sorry that they no longer had a king; Edinborough, with its war memorial so beautiful it makes you weep, and—last of all—Paris and clothes.

The Eugenie revival was intended to shock women out of their old clothes; a financial depression always brings a radical change in fashions for this reason, Miss Lichenstul said as she went on to tell how smart wool is for morning and suits for afternoon wear and to talk of skirt lengths (for the street they must come to the middle of the calf; trims and all the other details taken into consideration by the well-dressed woman.

Mrs. Victor Saudek was introduced as chairman of the department by Mrs. A. W. Bass, last year's chairman, who was elected vice chairman yesterday. Mrs. Hamilton R. Wicks was made secretary-treasurer; Mrs. T. M. Stahlman, Congress president, welcomed the members. Questionnaires containing a long list of potential interests were distributed with requests for recommendations as to subjects, discussions, speakers and other plans.

Officers Elected

Altogether it was a most auspicious beginning for the department.

Incidentally Mrs. Saudek and Miss Lichenstul are the only two women directors at KDKA, Mrs. Saudek being head of the home forum department.

FASHION HINTS FROM DEAUVILLE

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Sept. 12. — Interesting fashion hints are available at Deauville, where gather the smartest women in the world. Consider, for instance, the cunning ensemble seen there the other day. Silk tricot in a very close knit with a ratiness surface (you have heard, of course, how popular the rough fabrics are proving) is used for both the youthful bertha and small hat. It is of that lovely pale, faded color known as bleu lave and is worn with a dress of the same material in dark blue. The ribbon trimming is of dark blue grosgrain ribbon.

THE umbrella was sketched at Deauville. It is very short and stubby and is of transparent red oilcloth such as is used for slickers. The handle representing a parrot's head, the huge ball tips and the lower tip are all of prystal. One can almost imagine wishing for rain with such a treasure to show off!

Before Leasing.. Your Apartment

Reflecting the trend of the times, people who dwell in apartments are exercising more care than usual in selecting living quarters for the Fall and Winter, with the watchword "Economy" in mind.

After being satisfied with a suite of rooms they then inquire about other essentials of householding.

"Just what, aside from living quarters, will the rental check buy?

"Is it possible to obtain all the requisites to good living and at the same time achieve economies?

"Does it pay to shop carefully for apartments as for other household economies?"

There never has been (nor will there be) retrenchment in service at Schenley Apartments. That is because service is as much a part of living here as the buildings themselves.

You can learn what your rental check will buy here only by setting a time to inspect the premises and analyze the service.

Whatever size suite is desired, you will be exercising apartment wisdom if you examine the rental availabilities here before executing leases.

HOLLYWOOD READS -:- Players Go Literary In That Big Way -:- IN THE THEATERS -:- The Critics Are Present As New Shows Open

Book Seller Tells on Stars

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 12.

Hollywood's taste in literature reveals illuminating side lights on the personalities of the stars.

Stanley Rose, who has been selling books to the film people since 1922 and who describes them as the best read professional group in the world, knows all about the literary preferences of Hollywood's great and near-great.

At present, he says, the most valuable collection of first editions in the cinema capital belongs to Everett Horton. He flatters as one of the few collectors of first editions of Mark Twain.

Independent of their quality as books, Hollywood authors go well in the cinema capital. Queer People, says Rose, was one of the best sellers he ever had.

Courtney Terrett, author of "Only Saps Work," has signed a contract at Warner Brothers.

LATEST GOSSIP

Eileen Wilson, former wife of William Powell, talks of coming to Hollywood for a try at the talkies. When she is believed to be interested in pictures. Norman Hamilton, frequently strapped, is back on the shoulder wing. He goes on location next week, hikes.

Ann Harding was all set to play a two-week stage engagement in "Smilin' Thru" when Herbert Brown Hoover, ex-Kentucky boss, put his foot down. Producer Henry Duffy even had the sets designed. Marjorie White is leaving Fox. She and her husband, Edw. Termer, are leaving for New York on the 16th.

Joseph Schenck married back to Broadway, a la Dix and Adela Rogers Hyland. Is the beat. Edwin Burke, who does logue, "Strictly Dishonorable," defines Hollywood as "a place of magnificent accidents."

Gloria Swanson

Ann Harding

Fairbanks, on the other hand, goes in for poetry. Other stars and their preferences are: Richard Barthelmess, Emerson Hough, Will M. Maupin, Edna Ferber, Kathleen Norris and actor-author Lowell Sherman. Buddy De Sylva is a Kipling fan. Ann Harding goes in for Galsworthy. Gloria Swanson, books on art. Clarence Brown, books on the theater. Josef Von Sternberg studies occult philosophy, folk lore and black magic. Eric Von Stroheim studies court memoirs. Ray Griffith reads American first editions. Dave Butler, all color books, and Ned Hamilton reads American literature and the works of Mark Twain.

Independent of their quality as books, Hollywood authors go well in the cinema capital. Queer People, says Rose, was one of the best sellers he ever had.

Sheridan Has Bennett

"The Common Law," adapted to the screen from Robert W. Chambers' novel of the same name, opened yesterday in the Sheridan Square. Constance Bennett is starred.

Miss Bennett plays the role of an artist's model with advanced ideas of love. Joel McCrea portrays an American artist the maid she loves, who is modern in everything but love. Lew Cody is a suave, soft-spoken man of the world and the "other man" in the model's past.

Hedda Hopper, Robert Williams, Marion Shilling and Paul Ellis also are in the cast.

The film was seen in the Stanley a number of weeks ago.

Betty Garde Wins Part With Lenore Ulric

Betty Garde, who appeared in "Girl Habit" and "Secrets of a Secretary," recent Paramount pictures, has been signed to support Lenore Ulric in "The Social Register." Miss Garde, who incidentally ties with Greta Garbo as the tallest actress in motion pictures, declares that her desertion of the screen will not be permanent!

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Sept. 12.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

You can't beat that England. She don't look good till they get in a hole, then watch her.

Will Rogers

They wasn't afraid to put an additional tax on big incomes. They forget politics when they are in a tight place.

Republicans can't tax big incomes over here, for they haven't got next year's campaign budget set. Democrats still owe for their last three elections.

Somebody said that Al Smith wouldn't run next year, but Al says it wasn't him that said it.

Yours, WILL.

A Columnist's Sec'y Jots Down a Few Notes

Dear W. W.: I checked that thing about the Lindbergh baby. It is only one of those wild rumors that has been making the rounds for months and started by some imbecile. . . . Barbara Stanwyck and Frank Fay are being boycotted by movie producers until she does two more flickers, as per contract, for Columbia. . . . Success is awful sometimes, huh? . . . One of the girls who joined "Scandals" as a principal, and who now is buried in that show, says Fujimoto, the Jap, hasn't disappeared at all. That he merely joined "Scandals." . . . Agnes Hill phoned from Washington: Said that she wishes to make it clear that she is not married. A Hollywood matrimonial which is already the talk of Beth David Hospital, has a motive play for publicity. . . . They seem people a brand of enjoyment and ask them to dinner, enclosing both in an envelope. . . . The psychology: Who would steal a dead fish from a hearse?

The new Sing High, Sing Low show deals with opera people. One character in it is named Hugo Schultz supposed to be O. H. K. . . . Russel Crouse will take a 3 months' leave of absence from his paper to do a book. . . . No columnist will replace him. . . . He tried to do his work and two books last year, you know, and hasn't been the lighthearted since. . . . Eddie Cantor made a speech at a dinner and finished by saying: "Now, ladies, I will return to the places where you used to do the dishes." . . . When the new Waldorf opens it will be a new piece of flattery for the guests. When a guest signs the register his name will be flashed to attaches and bellboys on his floor. . . . Soon as the guest steps out of the elevator he will be greeted by his name. . . . Phil Offner called Sam Katz that Edward G. Robinson left Crawford's show, which is now playing at the Jefferson Theater, where the gangsters collect at the stage door and wait for Robinson to autograph their revolvers.

Over the week-end I stopped in a branch at Brinkstone, Mass. A sign on the wall read: "Please use only one lump of sugar and stir hard. We don't mind the noise." . . . Sally Morgan has some Golden Wedding and Log Cabin for you. I just heard that Jolson has 25 per cent of Max Gordon's forthcoming show, "Cat and Fiddle." . . . The Collette Sisters are sharing the Follies and two of the chorus girls may get their vacancies. Remember Lola Koch, the pretty girl who was insane to get in the movies? Well, she was in Hollywood and an influential director arranged a role for her. They had to take the scene over eight times, so she screamed. Is THIS the movies? . . . Yes, she was told.

She raced off the set and just arrived in New York out of breath. . . . While racing officials are tiffing over the Gar Wood affair, a mystery power boat is being readied by a sportsman which he will reveal on Columbus Day. He intends to shatter all speedboat marks. In other words the pilot will settle all speedboat disputes in less than half a minute on October 12. . . . Dave Murray called to offer: "On Broadway only a fool is sure of himself or his wife."

Call Frederick J. Smith about that other article. . . . Catuso, the tailor says that suit never will be done if you can't get up before 5. . . . That confidential brunette on the Pic Review cover is Mary Gloome. . . . Louise Glaum, once one of the movies' most glamorous vampires, is dwelling quietly in Kansas City. . . . One of the Lexington Ave. hotels which has over 800 rooms had only 100 of them filled.

That rag which was going to give so many newspapermen jobs and which has been dropping them faster than the show producers lay eggs, will have another clean-out on Oct. 1. . . . Find out if Gov. Roosevelt is planning to syndicate an autobiog or a biog or what? . . . Yvonne Sinclair, who once graced the Rio Rita ensemble, is now Mrs. Everett W. Chandler, of Greensboro, N. C. She has a 2-year-old girl, too. . . . Your mail is back. Wants to see the baby. . . . Here's an amusing angle of your connection in Panama. . . . It seems that the Panama-American in that town has been quoting your stuff, but with credit. . . . 'Honest, with credit and everything'? . . . Well, they quoted so many gags and bits that the Star-Herald, the opposition, decided to buy it. . . . You ought to thank Nelson Rounsevell, editor and pub of the American, or send him commission or a kind word. . . . Wallace Chittenden called to say that a group of Connecticut farmers are erecting a bronze monument to a hen. . . . Two to one they put the darn thing in the middle of the road.

The swanky St. Moritz gets all fussed when High Hats arrive doesn't it? . . . The other afternoon it flew the French flag for Barron Collier, our Deputy Commissioner, thinking he was a French nobleman. . . . The Napoleon will be open on Sundays henceforth. . . . When you hear a fellow panned hard 10 to 1 he is a Favorite. . . . As fr'xample . . . I heard a group of fliers roast someone last night and sure enough it turned out to be a fellow who Amounts to Something—merely Capt. Hawks. . . . Reminds me of that gag in Everybody's: "What's the reason for Marsie's unpopularity?" . . . The answer being: "She won a popularity contest!" . . . The only man in town with a hat that makes him look like a typical newspaperman works on a magazine.—Mr. Benchley. . . . Your first broadcast don't forget is September 15, WABC, at 8:45. . . . You prepared too much material, shave about two pages. . . . I'm coming up to watch you get nervous. . . . Funny that the papers overlooked the fact that when Lily Damita returned from Yurrup, so did Willie K. Vanderbilt, Jr., the heart of many seasons.

The N. Y. Legislature, by the way, will be urged to pass a bill making mutuels legal here. A concentrated effort will be made by the biggies so that the state will be enriched by at least 5 million annually. . . . Great thing for racing. . . . There's a new baseball game which you play with machines on the site housing those all-night bowling alleys on 51st. . . . Really a lota fun. . . . Plenty scandal about Jed Harris' new show, "Wonder Boy." . . . It was written by two press agents in the Columbia Pictures publicity dept. . . . It has a terrific sock at execs in that organization. . . . The authors worked at nights in their office and carelessly left copies around. . . . They were found and now their show will have to be a hit so they won't starve. . . . "Fortune" wants to do a piece on you, but they want it to be a stiff slap, they said. . . . So I told them, if they liked, that you would write it yourself (no fee) and they could use any name they desired, and nobody need know. —R. C.

Plays, Players and By-Play

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

There'll be not less than three Sunday midnight shows each to happen, of course, very early in the a. m. of Monday. In the Stanley will be Wheeler and Woolsey on the screen in "Caught Plastered" with Duke Ellington and his orchestra and other colloid entertainers on the stage. The Fulton will have a special preview of the film version of Vina Delmar's "Bad Girl" which comes to the same theater in the regular order of things Thursday. The other midnighter will be George Arliss in "Alexander Hamilton," the new feature for the Warner screen.

Small Timer, with a sad shake of his head, says that some men are born to be dominant—so they remain unmarried.

Fay Wray, from the filums, is in New York for rehearsal in the title role of the musical version of "NIKKI," based on the short stories by John Monk Saunders, to have its premiere in a New York theater September 21. She is not leaving the movies permanently, she announces.

Small Timer says that half the world not only does not know how the other half lives, but even wonders why.

The return of Maude Adams to the stage has been rumored frequently but now it appears that she really may do so. Furthermore, it is stated that Otis Skinner will appear opposite her and that the production, a play by John Colton, will bear the Erlanger hallmark. Contracts, it is claimed, are all signed, looking to an early winter appearance of Miss Adams.

Small Timer says that all kinds of remedies for the depression have been offered by people who are not willing to take their own medicine.

Stanley Has Two Goofs And Duke

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

Someone has slipped up on his job. Our parks are crowded with generals on horseback and civic leaders with one hand stuck in their waistcoats. But where, oh where, we ask you, is there any monument to baby droppers?

Baby droppers are greater public benefactors than a battlefield full of generals. It is they who have given us Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey. And if you don't think these gentlemen were dropped on their heads when they were babies, go to the Stanley and see them in "Caught Plastered." They can't be that crazy and be sane.

Yes sir, in the cause of laughter, baby dropping should be encouraged. So why not start to reward baby droppers with monuments. Besides, what a novel way it would be to spend the taxpayers' money.

WHAT, NO DRUGS!

This "Caught Short" with its story by Douglas MacLean, who used to be a gag emoter himself, is far from the best comedy in the world. But it is funny. It shows originality in lines and gags and nonsense is unconfined.

Messrs. Wheeler and Woolsey are seen as a couple of ham vaudeville actors, who come upon lean days. They meet a bankrupt old lady and take the job of running her drug store. The lady is so old-fashioned that she believes a drug store should sell drugs. But the boys have other ideas. And are they ideas! Dorothy Lee puts in romance and Frederic March is there as a mean fellow who would foreclose on poor widows.

THE STAGE SIZZLES

The Stanley stage sizzles like a night in Harlem. Duke Ellington is there with his band. Jazz talks right at you from saxaphone, drum, piano and such. There are musical moments that take the Black and Tan Fantasy's that are almost grotesque. There is a syncopating splendor about it all. Other entertainers are present. Radcliffe and Bob, in comedy and songs. Ivy Anderson, who does a grand job of Minnie the Moocher. Three Gobs, who tap their feet and sing. Wow performers all! It is an all-Negro show with an international flavor. There are Irish songs and songs in German as well as the low-down blues of Harlem.

Bernie Armstrong gives a medley of operetta melodies. Amusing in his comedy organlogues, it is in his more serious efforts, as the current one, that Mr. Armstrong's organloguing fingers are at their best.

And here's an announcement: There will be five performances daily, instead of four, during the Ellington engagement.

Bad Times Good For Health If Not For Happiness

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

Census Bureau tells us that the depression has made us healthier.

That's right. We live longer for no reason at all. And eat better when we are invited out.

Last year we told you about the business man who recovered his health sleeping in his office with the windows open.

There were no rude customers to disturb his nap.

However, we would rather worry plenty and have something to worry about.

Medical men dispute the bureau's statement. The doctors are suing just as many estates as they ever did.

It seems that the Census Bureau compiled its statistics without including hay fever, flat arches, home-made gin and one-armed driving.

But, if the bureau is right and we are healthier than ever, we are glad to hear it.

And we will make a sincere effort to feel that way.

Stories That Cannot Be Used

MY DESK is filled with countless yarns that cannot be used in this column. I'm going to choose a few at random and give them to you. I want you to understand why they couldn't possibly be used in this space. It's a good thing to know for future reference.

Here's one that tells about Jim R——, a worker in the morgue. It's a tough job Jim has, what with meeting numerous tragedies every day and acting as file clerk to decks of stiffs. But he doesn't seem to mind it at all. He says it's very peaceful and quiet. And good for a man's nerves, too.

"There's no noise around here to give you a headache," says Jim.

And what's more, the customers don't give you any bother. It's much better than the job I had in the Bellevue observation ward. That was a really tough spot. Plenty of noise around there."

They found Jim in a dead faint the other morning—in the men's washroom. In came a couple of policemen and did the necessary things to revive him. As they worked the patrolmen discussed the case.

"Must have got the creeps," said one.

"Sure," agreed the other. "Any guy would go bugs around here." Finally Jim came to. And the first thing he did was apologize for passing out.

"Doggone it," he muttered, as he wiped his brow. "I gave myself a nasty cut while shaving and passed right out. I never could stand the sight of blood."

Here's another that certainly couldn't be used. It tells of a celebrated American actress who has been playing on the stage for years and years. She still thinks she's very kittenish, however, and insists upon playing parts that are just a little sexy. The people laugh—but she doesn't know.

A short time back she decided to travel through Egypt. In regal style she visited the various points of interest. And in due time she stood before the Sphinx. Suddenly, as though overcome by the great and historic figure, she fell to her knees before it.

"Oh, wonderful Sphinx," she cried dramatically. "I am unquestionably the greatest actress in all the world. Please speak to me. Will you speak to me?"

For the first time, the Sphinx spoke.

"Hello, mamma," it said.

Here's another that couldn't possibly be turned into column material. In a field at the Hart's Island prison there is a horse. "Doin' Time." He probably had a nicer name in the days before he was sent to the island—but that was a long time ago.

He never does any work. Pensioned by the city, "Doin' Time" is a privileged character who goes cavorting about the field like the big shot he is, while other horses trudge through their day's toil.

It's strange in a way, because other horses can't be put in the same field with him when the day's work is over. He's too mean and unruly. If a keeper in his dark uniform and brass buttons enters the field, "Doin' Time" always comes charging toward him. And if the keeper doesn't get out of the field in time the result is just too bad.

But "Doin' Time" has his favorites. If an inmate in the uniform of lighter blue has the inclination, he can walk right up to the horse. And "Doin' Time," peculiarly enough, is as docile as a lamb.

At every opportunity an inmate will bring him a lump of sugar, or an apple, or anything that might please his fancy. The number of inmates who have been stealing sugar or apples for "Doin' Time" would surprise you greatly. But the prisoners didn't care. They felt that the horse had to be taken care of.

You think that they are all lovers of horses, or that this particular nag makes their sentences any easier to bear? You're mistaken. The prisoners simply live up to the unwritten law that is in vogue in every jail throughout the land—"make it as easy as possible for the other inmate."

But, you will ask, what possible bearing can this have on a horse? To the prisoners, it's all very clear. As far as the city authorities are concerned, "Doin' Time" was an old horse in the police service who became unmanageable. One day he threw and killed his master and was pensioned to the island.

But to the prisoners he killed a cop—their enemy—and is merely "Doin' Time."

Now take a look at this one. A gentleman named L. R. Berger sent it to me as a contribution some time back. How he ever expected me to print it, I cannot say. Imagine this column using such a story as the following:

A very benevolent gentleman was seated in the living room of his magnificent Long Island home on a recent afternoon.

His fourth butler entered the room.

"Mr. Bigshot," he asserted nervously, "there is a strange character on our lawn. He's a bit of a bug, sir, if you'll pardon my expression. Would you believe it, sir, he's eating our grass!"

"Eating our grass?" repeated Mr. Bigshot incredulously. "What in the world is he doing that for?"

"I don't know, sir," replied the butler. I've asked him to depart, but he refuses to take me seriously."

The benevolent gentleman arose from his chair.

"Possibly the man is hungry," said Mr. Bigshot. "I shall see for myself."

A few minutes later the charitable man stood beside the individual in question. It was all too true. The poor fellow was eating the grass in a most unmannerly fashion. Mr. Bigshot inquired the cause.

"It's because I'm hungry," replied the grass eater. "I'm an ex-convict and a bad man. But I'm hungry."

The great man helped the unfortunate one to his feet.

"This is terrible," he announced, in a choking voice. "I do not care who and what you are. I am Mr. Bigshot—and a Bigshot has never been known to fail the needy. Come with me."

Arm in arm, the two men walked together. They walked perhaps a quarter of a mile. And there they came to a large field. Mr. Bigshot placed an arm around the other man's shoulder and smiled happily.

"Here we are, my friend," he bellowed. "Look how much more beautiful the grass is in this spot. Eat your fill!"

You see now why I cannot print such stories? If you do, I congratulate you.

'Street Scene' Is as Good As Play

By GEORGE SEIBEL

You go to see "Street Scene" with fear and trembling, knowing what they do to life and art when they are carted to the Hollywood lot. You come away feeling that you should send the obstetrical staff a telegram of congratulations. For the picture at the Penn, with due allowance for the third dimension, is as good as the play.

George Seibel

This is due to the things they have not done. Elmer Rice's script is left just about as they found it. The mob is bigger, of course, and there are a few attempts at sky-lines and traffic jams, but not enough to hurt. Nor is there any effort to inject extra gowns, more sobs or a happier ending.

And so we have life and art as we had them in Elmer Rice's tremendous drama.

ACTING IS GOOD

The same restraint marks the casting, in which there are no tinsel stars, but some intelligent and hard-working actors. Sylvia Sidney is very sweet; Estelle Taylor has the pathos of the hungry heart; Young William Collier and Max Montor do striking work among the men.

That Hollywood director who was screening the Passion Play and wanted to get a few hundred extras into the Lord's Supper will see many opportunities that have been missed in "Street Scene," but let's be thankful they were missed. A great drama has been turned into a great picture.

AL WOHLMAN AUDITIONS

The stage show revolves around some talented youngsters introduced by Al Wohlman, to show what opportunities await the ambitious on Broadway. If they can turn themselves into a human corkscrew, as Geraldine does in her adagio dance, or get such thrills out of a clarinet and an old lamp as Wilton Crawley does, let them hike toward the Great White Way.

Queen Queen and Queen do a dancing triptych and Frank Farnum a solitaire whirl that are worthy, while Al Wohlman sings "Dreams to Mend," by the Penn's own pianist, to show we can produce better songs than Tin Pan Alley. Besides Dick Leibert goes classic with a Rachmaninoff Prelude played as a piano and organ duet by himself.

Meanwhile the people who were there forgot all about the thermometer.

Ann Dvorak Gets Lead In Air Comedy

Discovered in the extra ranks where she was practically unnoticed for three years, Ann Dvorak, 19-year-old ex-dancer and stage actress, has been signed to a long-term contract by Howard Hughes.

Miss Dvorak wins this contract, and incidentally her first real opportunity in pictures, on the strength of her performance in "Scarface," the Howard Hughes gangster film. Her first assignment under the new contract is the leading feminine role in "Sky Devils."

Jack Holt, Ralph Graves Together Again

Because of the popular demand for Jack Holt and Ralph Graves in "buddy" roles similar to those which characterized "Submarine," "Flight," "Hell's Island" and "Dirigible," Columbia Pictures has signed the pair for the featured roles in "The Ghost Walks." The picture is a tale presenting the humorous and dramatic angle of the newspaper business, with a love theme interwoven.

MacDonald In Hearst News

THE GLOBE TROTTER

Ramsay MacDonald, Premier of Great Britain, his back to the wall, makes his first public statement regarding Great Britain's financial crisis in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News, showing in the Penn and other theaters. He refers to the underlying couses of Germany's monetary predicament and loss of credit, and intimates that the same disaster could overtake his own great nation. He calls upon the entire British public to back the government in his plan to avert disaster.

Ol' Man River has a new bed—which Uncle Sam's engineers hope will prevent destructive floods along the Mississippi. This huge mattress is made of small sections of concrete joined together so that the whole is flexible. It is then shown being lowered over the banks and anchored and the Globe Trotter gives a vivid description of what is expected of it.

Thrills are contained in sensational pictures of the accident to Miss England II when she overturned in the second heat for the Harmsworth cup in Detroit. Rounding a curve at terrific speed, Miss England II, in the wake of Gar Wood's Miss America IX, skids and leaps out of the water like a wounded bird, then crashes, splitting herself in half. There are scenes of rescue of Kaye Don and his crew.

A bloodless bullfight, in which the toreadors are forbidden to hurt the animals, takes place at San Pablo, Cal. The bull chases its tormentors all over the ring and seems to come out on at least even terms in the exciting contest.

Five sisters wed five brothers in Chehalis, Wash. They are all named Hadaller, and in addition to the 10 adults there are a score of little Hadallers. Each year they hold a family reunion and they are pictured as they gathered for the last one.

Traveling at the record-breaking speed of 236 miles an hour, Lowell Bayles is shown winning the Thompson trophy at the national air races in Cleveland. His tiny plane tips at a dangerous angle as he circles the pylons of the field, leaving his rival far behind. There are scenes of other exciting events at the air races.

Motorcycle policemen in Mexico City show their efficiency in a striking display at the National Stadium. Trick riding and mass drills are features of the exhibition.

The study shows that present-day students are taller and more slender than their fathers. This is the case even though the average weight has increased by eight pounds. The increases are noted particularly in arm length, shoulder breadth and chest circumference.

It is of interest to note that a similar study made of women of three generations also shows marked improvement in the physique. The present generation of girls according to the figures indicates that they are one and one-tenth inches taller and seven pounds heavier than their mothers. They have greater chest expansion, lung capacity and chest development showing notable physical superiority to their mothers.

It is natural that the older generation always claims to be superior to the present generation. I am sure that when my son grows up he will claim his generation was the very best. It is not even now unclaim that mine is superior to his.

Race Deterioration Myth Disproved in Harvard Test

We often hear discussions as to whether or not our race is degenerating. The claim is often made by older persons that things are not as they used to be, that the youth of their day were far superior to the youth of today. Their boast relates to mental superiority as well as to physical strength.

There is no doubt that our forebears endured more hardship than we do. But this does not mean we could not endure them. Circumstances have changed so that we do not face such demands as did our forefathers.

At Harvard University a very careful survey has been made of the height and weight of college students. This study included 2,000 pairs of fathers and sons and 500 mothers and daughters of three generations.

This study revealed that the present generation of Harvard men whose fathers and grandfathers attended that college represents one of the tallest groups in the world. At present the students average in height 5 feet 10 1/10 inches. The increase in stature over a period of years has been at the rate of about one-tenth for every 25 years.

All measurements have increased with the exception of head breadth, breadth of hips and length of the upper arm. Leg length has increased more than the trunk length and the thighs have elongated more than the shins.

Answers to Health Queries

J. D. Q. What's wrong with my back?

A. Since there are many causes of backache it would be wise to have an examination to learn the exact cause.

Miss K. Q. What causes body odor and what treatment will relieve the condition?

A. This may be due to auto-intoxication. Keep the system free by proper attention to the diet and elimination.

R. S. Q. What should a boy of 15, 5 feet 11 inches tall, weigh?

A. He should weigh about 150 pounds; this would be about average for his age and height as determined by examination of a large number of persons.

Teaching Child Gratitude

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

The man whose name you would recognize were it to be mentioned sat in his office and talked. How best to become the success that he is.

"Well," he said, "I haven't any formula. Just kept on working and plodding and studying.

"But things weren't always easy." I suggested, for I had heard of his early struggles.

"Bless you, no," he laughed. Then he was silent for a silent minute. "The root of the whole thing—my ability to stick," he continued, "I think goes back to a habit my mother had me form in childhood. Every night before I went to bed she had me tell her one thing I was grateful for out of the day's activities. I never got over that, and when I was a young man alone in New York I still sat on the edge of my bed each night and told myself the one big thing I was most grateful for on that day. He laughed. "Once," he said, "I'd been all day without food or money to buy food. That night I sat for a long while before I could think of anything to be exceedingly grateful for. Then I began to laugh at everything, including myself, and I solemnly told the unsaying walls that out of all the seemingly bad things which had come up that day, I was grateful I hadn't fallen down and broken my leg as a climax.

"As an aid, we can turn to adults rather than children to learn about child training.

"I don't know what your religion is. I only know that if it helps you to a cleaner, more honest, happier life it is the right religion for you. And I'm sure that in ANY religion gratitude, a declaration of being grateful for the things we usually take for granted is one of the most sincere prayers we can offer.

"If you can teach your child as this older man was taught to select even one thing each day and be GRATEFUL for it, you are giving that child a true foundation for any religion, a sound keystone for LIFE and a sure recipe for success. Success to my mind not meaning a hoard of bonds so much as a useful, happy life each day of that life.

"Gratitude doesn't have the place it deserves in a lot of our lives, maybe because we've never consciously thought of it. But let us DO think of it now and give the children that precious straw to hang onto every day of their lives, not only as children but as stimulus sometimes discouraged men and women.

GREEN PAJAMAS

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

"Green" said Gloriette, "is the color of JOY, and Polly and I are both joyful, and by our beauty we hope we give out that pleasant commodity. Polly is green, and she already has on a pair of pajamas—or so it appears to me when she goes sidling by—so for myself I shall go in for green pajamas, too. Polly is FUNNY in hers—I trust I shall not be funny in mine!

"Green" said Gloriette, "is for joy—but it is said to be restful too. But neither Polly nor I can be said to be restful to anybody—we both chatter—and furnish quite some unrest to an already noisome world. Pipe down, Polly, and try to be restful in your Pajama-Verd, and so, too, will I!"

Madge Believes Someone Is Trying to "Vamp" Noel

Hair net
Harris Underwood frowned when in answer to his query as to whether there was no one she could bring Mary to reason
I said that I would try my luck with her if someone would keep watch of the baby. But what's happened to our dear friend the Kat? I never knew her to be off watch before when she had a goods to perform and a patient or a baby to watch. I've always had the general impression that when she sleeps she has a clinical thermometer tucked behind her right ear, a temperature chart pinned to her gown and holds in either shapely hand an ice pack and a hot-water bottle.

Lillian laughed with me at his nonsense, but her eyes as they met mine were keen with concerned inquiry, and it was her eyes I answered rather than her husband's gibing.

She had a letter which upset her, and she's gone to my room for a little. I said while my eyes involuntarily went to the letter from Hal Meredith which still lay unopened upon the table.

Lillian's eyes followed mine and her lips formed the silent query, "That one?" I shook my head, and Art Husband solemnly chuckled while I flushed, and Lillian's lips for a fleeting instant formed a "Tsh!" like the only sign she ever gives of embarrassment. I had forgotten, and I knew she had that her husband was a lip reader par excellence.

Not that one," he said, pointing to it as a cute child might. "Well now, that's kind of odd. Without my glasses I can see that the postmark on that comes from a country which holds a man who writes a letter which in my judgment would upset our dear Katrina more than another."

I'm afraid this is one of the times when you're not two to your judgments, Mr. Dear Frood," I told him. "If you'll be your own eyes a little more, you'll see that the letter on the table has been opened."

That's the reason it upsets her," he retorted, unperturbable. "She probably doesn't dare to."

Please bring him to order, Lillian," I begged as I rose to go to Mary's room. "He's getting impossible lately. You let him run wild for much up in the Berkshire hills. Do not let him get too near the baby. He'll have a bad influence over her."

Ruby Pearl Opal-Violet doesn't care what kind of influence I exert," he said mouthing with gusto every syllable of the fantastic names Roderick and Junior wished to call the baby. "She's got more sense in her little noodle this second than all the mothers and grandmothers and pseudo aunts in the country put together, and she has warm passions for me. I can see it in her eyes when she laughs up at me."

Also color," Lillian said witheringly, but I did not hear his reply, for I was already around the corner and headed toward Mary's room.

I expected to find her in bed. Marion had said that she still was there, but as I paused outside her door I heard sounds which I recognized. Since Mary has been a small child she has thrown her shoes across the room when she is angry, and I realized that she was doing it now. There were other sounds also, tramping up and down. I guessed in moccasins for the militantly marching footfalls were muffled and muttered exclamations gradually crescendo.

At my knock the sounds suddenly ceased, but when Mary, with face flashing storm signals, opened the door and saw that it was I she choked and then began to speak hurriedly with excitement that appeared to be mounting by leaps.

Oh, I'm glad that it's you, Auntie Madge," she said. "I thought it was Marion coming back, and I don't want to let her know anything about this. It would only put ideas in the kid's head. But with you I can spill over, you're always so comfy and understanding."

But she flung away from the hand I put upon her arm, and I saw that she wanted no sympathy, only the chance to spill over.

She was pacing the floor again, and I carefully pulled a chair into a corner and sat down, knowing by experience that there was nothing to be done with her until her temper fit had worn itself out.

She had forgotten me almost as soon as I entered, and the astonishing words which came from her pretty lips were addressed apparently to the empty air.

That long-legged, knock-kneed, skinny imitation vamp. Just wait until I get hold of her. I'll mess those mascara eyebrows all over her face. I'll teach her to let my boy friend alone.

Household Hints

Don't forget to keep one or two guest towels on the rack in readiness for the unexpected.

After the summer's hard wear have you a collection of yellowed white stockings that you wonder just what you will do with? You can change them to a pretty tan shade by boiling them for a few minutes in strong tea and then rinsing them in clear water.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beekman

Introducing Baby

Dear Mrs. Beekman:

I expect to become a mother soon and as the birth announcements that are already printed do not appeal to me I was wondering if you would give me an announcement that would be in better taste.

I would also like to know if these announcements are to be engraved? W. K.

The only birth announcement that to me seems to have the fine taste and the dignity that such an important announcement should have is the one that consists of the engraved Mr. and Mrs. card, with the small white baby-card attached. The Mr. and Mrs. card I am sure you are familiar with, white, generous-sized, and with the formal name engraved on it. When the baby arrives and has been named, have your stationer engrave the little card with the name of the baby, and in the lower left corner, the date of the birth. This is all that there is on the card. Sometimes now to carry out the formality Miss is engraved before the name of a girl, and Master before a boy's name. The card is attached with a very narrow white ribbon.

The Mr. and Mrs. card you may have engraved now, if you do not own this kind of card and you will always find many uses for it, besides this use.

Second Marriage

Dear Mrs. Beekman:

Will you kindly inform me if it is correct for a woman to wear both wedding rings if she has been married twice? Her second husband is still living.

QUESTION MARK.

When a woman decides to marry a second time she should cease wearing the engagement ring and wedding ring that are the symbols of her first marriage.

The Cardiac Clinic

By DOROTHY ROE

There was a little girl
And she had a little curl
That hung right down on her forehead.
When she was good
She was very, very good
But when she was bad she was horrid.

Some of our food parents shut their eyes tightly and deny it all.

Some look on their gin-soaked offspring tolerantly, and say:

Oh, well boys and girls will be boys and girls!"

A great many would not believe their eyes if they should drop into a popular New York speakeasy most any night and see the dainty debutantes and their prep-school boy-friends lined up at the bar, ordering gin-fizzes with the same delight that another generation took in ice cream sodas.

People who insist that prohibition is a success make it a point to remain ignorant of the 30,000-odd speakeasies that flourish in New York City alone.

And when sensational news stories such as that of the ill-fated Starr Faithfull bring to their attention the fact that lovely young girls of good homes sometimes rival the "horrible examples" displayed by old-time temperance lecturers in their liquor capacity, they avert their eyes and murmur in shocked tones: "It can't be true!"

But it is true.

Any casual observer of the modern scene sees wholesale drinking going on all about him among boys and girls of high school age.

If they live in small towns, where speakeasies aren't handy, they carry their own giggle-beverage and drink it on verandas and in cars.

And even the most tolerant philosopher must admit, after an evening in a typical speakeasy, that girls who are drinking are not attractive.

A demure and dainty little miss who normally is the most reserved and ladylike of persons, may be transformed into a strident virago after a few potions of our modern bootleg liquor.

The speakeasy seems to be the leveler of all persons.

Women who preserve their reticence on all other occasions will break down and bare their life secrets under the influence of a couple of highballs at a soft-lighted table.

It is a well authenticated fact that few women are able to drink gracefully.

Perhaps it is because they are novices at the game. They haven't had the generations of experience enjoyed by their masculine companions.

But any girl who has cast an observant eye over the flushed faces, the hazy eyes and the touseled hair of the average feminine clientele of a speakeasy must murmur fervently to herself:

"I hope I never look like that!"

And despite their protestations to the contrary, few men admire a drunken girl. She doesn't fit into the traditional scheme of things.

Do you agree? If not, write me, care of Universal Service, World Building, New York City.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Tulle stockings! Absolutely! Might as well not wear any, though you'll feel like a million dollars when you have on a pair. Ordinary legs won't do for them. Can't have any horrid sprouting fuzzers there, and it is almost necessary to use a foundation cream and ivory pink powder if the effect is to be what one desires.

Soaps and bath salt matching in color and odor are delightful luxuries for the bathroom. A soap dish that floats atop the bath water is a convenience. Firm bath brushes of bristles that don't mat cost plenty of money but they keep the skin all over the body in good condition because they help roll away dead cuticle scales.

Cosmetic surgeons have constant calls from poor deat ladies who would have sagging puffs under their eyes obliterated. Caused by fatigue, depleted health, late hours usually. Constant regard for the laws of hygiene will lessen these swellings, unless they are constitutional or inherited, in which event they mean nothing. Temporary help is given by application of hot water, followed by cold. Pads of gauze dipped in witch hazel, laid over the eyes, are refreshing, act as astringents, flatten swollen tissues.

Some of the new coiffures are nothing less geometric. There is a three-parting arrangement that forms a perfect triangle on the crown of the head, one part straight across the back, two slanting partings from the center of the forehead. Mercy on us! Life is becoming complicated. Maybe we'll have to go to the carpenter for a hair cut, have our domes measured with compasses and T squares. Fancy getting a hair cut with a circular saw! Never mind, these modern coiffures have marvelous possibilities in the ways of personality hairdresses.

The Loudspeaker

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—No better indication of the passing of oldtime football tradition can be offered than the gridiron schedule of the radio rulers.

In other years the broadcasters have awaited at the gates of Yale, Harvard and Princeton, waiting the approving nod of the graduate managers, believing that the ears of the country were clamoring for the stadium struggles of the so-called "Big Three." No more, my comrades.

Judging from a peek at the football broadcast schedules of Columbia the radio rulers care not a hoot for Yale, Harvard and Princeton. But how they do care for Army, Notre Dame and Southern California! Their new-found affection for the gridiron prestige of the latter three—and it's not so new-found at that, if our memory is not entirely senile and seems justified by a mere glance at the dear old scoreboard. Army, Notre Dame and Southern California are not in a habit of being beaten. Yale, Harvard and Princeton are. And there's the story, and the broadcasters will stick to it.

After all, the radio men take their cue from the listeners. And listeners during the past few seasons have not been able to suppress their yawns at the reports broadcast of Yale, Harvard and Princeton games. In innumerable instances the listeners have grown very, very wrathy that they were compelled to listen to the struggles of the "big-three" when they would much sooner have bent their ears to teams that had not formed a depressing habit of defeat.

And so the broadcast shahs, in arranging this autumn's list of Saturday afternoon excitements, have turned their gaze away from New Haven and Cambridge and Princeton, have turned it chiefly, to be specific, to the Middle West, the Far West and South, to the great open spaces where men are football players and Rockne's spirit drives them on.

It was Rockne who was responsible for the new turn of football events. He it was who made football a national spectacle, who developed its glamor from a sectional phase into a national, who circused it, who provided thrills for 50,000,000 listeners. It is only logical that the broadcasters should attempt to reap where he sowed.

Swearingen in Common Pleas Court, directing elections officials of all districts of the ward to deliver ballot boxes immediately after the close of the election and count to Alderman Charles A. Burke, of the Seventh Ward.

The order was handed down on petition of Police Magistrate Charles P. Papale, who said that in the aggressive campaign for alderman and other offices much rivalry and bitterness has been engendered. His petition read:

"It has been freely charged that many acts, things and practices have been done which are charged to have been unlawful and for the purpose of procuring fraudulent assessments and registrations of voters.

"Petitioner believes on information he considers reliable that because of these conditions there are bound to be charges that fraud, although not manifest on the general returns of votes therefrom, have been committed in the computation of the votes cast in each of the election districts of the Twelfth Ward, or in the marking of the ballots or otherwise. Petitioner believes many boxes will be brought into court to be opened and recounted."

The aldermanic contest in the Seventeenth Ward between Patrick F. Riley, administration candidate, and Alderman John P. Kaercher, supported by County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong, also produced a petition for custody of ballot boxes for all the districts of the ward, presented in Common Pleas Court by Attorney David M. Harrison, representing Riley.

Judge J. Swearingen ordered the boxes delivered into the custody of Sheriff Robert S. Cain immediately after the close of the election and count Tuesday.

LUBBOCK, Tex., Sept. 12.—(AP.)—Driving a string of cow ponies, Virginia Wester, 16, rode into Lubbock with the intention of establishing a riding stable to pay her way through Texas Technological College.

Miss Wester is the daughter of H. W. Wester, a graduate of Virginia University, who operates a dude ranch in New Mexico.

SPEAKER LAUDS ARMSTRONG

Improvements made by Allegheny County under the direction of County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong will pay for themselves within a surprisingly short time," declared R. V. Bingay, president of the Pittsburgh Stove and Range Company, in a broadcast last night over KDKA in behalf of Armstrong's candidacy to succeed himself.

He said he was not a politician and has no interest in the campaign except a desire to see a capable and efficient official returned to office.

Mrs. A. G. H. Frazier, vice chairman of Armstrong's campaign committee, was host to 1,500 women at a tea yesterday in Armstrong's Hotel Henry headquarters. District Attorney Andrew T. Park, candidate for a full term, urged the re-election of Armstrong.

Although a large number of industrials have broken through to new lows for the year, the industrial average has held above the bottom for June. Most students believe that the previous low in this average will be tested in the not distant future, because continued declines will result in increased liquidation by outsiders. The manner in which this group acts when and if the low is broken will have considerable influence on sentiment and the operations of many of the professionals who follow the Dow theory.

For the last few months factories of Endicott-Johnson have been running at capacity according to an official announcement. In that time the sales in units of pairs of shoes have been about 30 per cent in excess of those in the corresponding period last year. Apparently the company has been obtaining its share in the improvement which came in the shoe industry several months ago.

Stock Exchange houses which do a large investment business report that a good part of their current commissions are coming from the execution of buying orders that have been on their books since 1928 and 1929. Partners of these houses confess that they considered the levels at which such orders were received, but that recent developments have borne out the judgment of the far-sighted buyers. In this connection it was recalled that Russel Sage used to say that he always entered his selling orders at prices which few expected to be seen, and when they were reached he fixed his repurchase limits at levels which seemed ridiculous at the time.

The selling which came into Columbian Carbon up to a few days ago was attributed in some quarters to the liquidation of holdings of the late C. Harold Smith, formerly a vice president and director of the company. In well informed circles, however, it was not believed that there was any foundation for such an opinion. The opinion is that the stock was made a target for short selling by a group of traders, and the covering after the decline was halted seemed to confirm this belief.

Considering the huge total of dividend payments which are to be made by a handful of the country's largest corporations in the near future, it is difficult to realize that the general business situation is so bad as conditions indicate. Five of the leading utility and industrial corporations will pay out a total of nearly $110,000,000 in the form of quarterly dividends in the next few weeks, the bulk of the disbursements to be made in the next few days. The General Motors Corporation disbursed checks for some $32,000,000 last night, while on Tuesday stockholders of du Pont will receive checks for $11,000,000, those of the Standard Oil of New Jersey for $12,800,000 and Socony-Vacuum shareholders a total of $12,700,000. On October 15, next, the American Telephone and Telegraph will disburse in all $41,034,000 in payment of dividends on its capital stock.

Prepare Data for Fight on Tariff

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—The preparation of data showing the wide variety of items excluded entirely or overburdened by high tariff rates has been decided upon by the National Council of American Importers and Traders as the first step in a campaign for tariff adjustment. Chairmen and directors of the council at a meeting here endorsed the proposal for an active fight against the tariff, but decided that a definite groundwork of facts covering specific commodities should be prepared before action is taken.

CHICAGO, Sept. 12.—Wholesale butter prices reached the highest point yesterday that has been touched since April 2 on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. The November delivery sold as high as 29½ cents a pound on news that supplies are moving out of storage at a faster rate because of hot weather.

STOCK MARKET AGAIN HEADS DOWNWARD

Westinghouse Dips to New Low; General Electric And Steel Lose Ground

NEW YORK, Sept. 12—(AP.)—Stocks opened irregularly higher today, but the market soon slipped back into its recent habit of declining after a fairly promising start. Narrow early gains had been turned into losses by the end of the first half hour.

Selling of Westinghouse, whose directors meet for dividend action next week, sent the stock off 2 points to a new low. American Telephone reflected concern over Western Electrics dividend meeting scheduled for next Tuesday, and the shares dipped a couple of points. General Electric, United States Steel, Union Carbide, American Can, Baltimore & Ohio, Norfolk & Western and Case lost one of slightly more. Mullins preferred was weak. International Business Machines jumped 8 points on the first sale. Rock Island was up 2¼.

The market's refusal to extend yesterday's technical rally which was stimulated by indications of important support, seemed to be based in part on the absence of constructive news. There have recently been nebulous reports of possible announcements at Washington.

Sterling Cables opened unchanged at $4.86.

COAL DEMAND FIRMS UP

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—Signs that the summer slump had run its course in the Middle Western bituminous markets became apparent in August. An increase in the demand for prepared sizes caused prices to stiffen in the closing weeks of the month, and retailers in general showed more willingness to add to stocks, Coal Age reports.

Steam sizes failed to gain in the face of light industrial takings, with the result that slack and screenings prices eased slightly as the weeks went by. August brought no relief to eastern marketing centers, however. Both domestic and steam demand languished, and prices, in a number of cases, slid off in the closing weeks.

Increased buying in the last week of August rescued the anthracite markets of the country from an otherwise slow month. The demand was confined largely to domestic sizes, however, as the steam trade continued in its long-standing slump.

Egypt Advances Customs Duties

CAIRO, Egypt, Sept. 12.—(AP.)—The customs duty on spare parts for motor cars has been increased from 15 per cent to 25 per cent ad valorem.

The duty on tea and coffee is raised approximately one cent a pound from 200 piastres to 250 piastres (about $10 to $12.50) on 100 kilograms (220 pounds) gross.

Excise duties are fixed as follows: Beer, approximately $7.94 per 26.42 gallons; benzine $4.36 per 100 kilograms, and lubricating oil, 28 cents per 100 kilograms.

Great Western Net For August Lower

CHICAGO, Sept. 12.—Patrick H. Joyce, chairman and acting president of the Chicago, Great Western Railroad, said the road should report net income of more than $110,000 for August, which would compare with net income of $199,849 for the corresponding month last year. He added that an important cause of the decrease in net is that "despite the fact that equipment maintenance expenditures were higher last month than in the same period of 1930."

Argentina Seeking Renewal of Loan

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—(AP.)—Negotiations looking to a renewal loan of $30,000,000 to the Argentine government are in progress between that government and American and other foreign oil companies operating in the Argentine.

WALL STREET HEARS

That General Electric's earnings are showing a decline from the second quarter, although there is no fear concerning safety of the current dividend.

That railroad circles are expecting the Interstate Commerce Commission will grant a freight rate increase of about 8 per cent.

That sales of radio receivers this year will be about two-thirds of the 1930 volume, with profits 25 per cent lower.

CORPORATE EARNINGS

The American Telephone and Telegraph Company and its wholly owned associated companies reported for the six months ended June 30 net earnings, after charges, of $2,701,112, compared with $2,937,132. Operating income for the two months this year aggregated $5,116,831, against $19,990,987.

American Seating Company and subsidiaries report for six months ended June 30 net loss of $190,240 after depreciation, interest, etc., against net profit of $181,394 in the first half of 1930.

[illegible] in 1927 and 1930 which [illegible] endings there were [illegible] increases.

Production for the [illegible] two weeks is [illegible] over 29 per cent [illegible] day and the ending of the vacation season, were active factors in some sort of an increase [illegible] expected for next week. Hopes of a large seasonal or other increase in total steel demand have not been abandoned and all that is expected now is marked increases in a few items particularly subject to seasonal influence. Some items are subject to seasonal decrease and it is problematical which will predominate to make the [illegible] mand.

YEARS COMPARED

Total [illegible] of [illegible] of steel [illegible] in the first eight months of the year was 19,000,000 tons. Allowing for a mild seasonal increase and then the usual sharp end decrease, the year's total would be around 25,000,000 tons, counting on an increase [illegible] year-end decrease, the total would be around 25,000,000 tons. It is quite impossible that the actual total will fall materially outside these limits. Comparable comparisons are [illegible] showed nearly 40,000,000 tons and 1929 the record year, nearly 57,000,000 tons. Relatively favorable comparisons are that 1921 fell under 20,000,000 tons and the best year prior to 1922 showed only 54,087,000 tons, the next best being nearly 2,000,000 tons less.

U. S. STEEL REPORT

The steel corporation's report of unfilled obligations is only occasionally of much general significance as to the course of trade, and of late the significance has been minimized by actual shipping orders constituting so small a proportion of the total and by the possibility of obligations being written off through their having grown entirely out of date or available for actual operations. The 2,169,457 tons reported for the end of August would involve production for about six and a half months at the August rate of shipping, approximately 3.7 per cent of capacity. The August decrease of 235,156 tons was the fifth consecutive decrease and compares with August decreases in five of the last eight years. In the same years September showed an increase five times.

SCRAP MARKET QUIET

Finished steel prices are [illegible] steady all along the line and of late there has been practically no concern about them. It is not expected that prices would [illegible] in case wages are reduced as the wage reduction would be made to reduce losses. According to precedent, price-[illegible] decline in the more distant future on the occasion of a large increase in demand bringing about lower average unit costs.

The local scrap market has been very quiet in the last week, following a little activity. Heavy melting steel has been at $10.00 to $11 for nearly two months.

BUILDING SEEN AS AID TO REVIVAL

Associated Contractors Plan Emergency Program To Stimulate Business

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12 (AP)—Application of wartime measures to combat depression was proposed today by the executive committee of the Associated General Contractors of America.

The committee, meeting here, decided it will seek to have the corporations declare all [illegible] stimulating the mobilization of capital and then stimulate [illegible] of integrated Iowa agencies [illegible] specific objectives to attack [illegible] the [illegible] of every governmental [illegible] to defeat [illegible] to combat the forces of [illegible].

CONFIDENCE NEEDED

[illegible] in reports [illegible] the situation [illegible] with general business [illegible] business statistician [illegible] was necessary to restore confidence. Since 1928 contract [illegible] declined steadily [illegible] the first seven months of [illegible] from that maximum [illegible] $28,200,000 per calendar [illegible] $8,200,000 on the basis of F. W. Dodge Corporation figures which eliminate [illegible] the [illegible] east of the Rocky Mountains. For the corresponding [illegible] 1929 they had declined to $16,100,000 per day and [illegible] $13,200,000 per calendar day [illegible] the first seven months [illegible].

SEEK UNITED ACTION

[illegible] of confidence [illegible] be forthcoming [illegible] and the business [illegible] would at least [illegible] the collapse [illegible] be forced upon [illegible] authority [illegible] $23,000,000 per calendar day [illegible] as [illegible] 1930.

[illegible] was said that [illegible] would be a united attack on [illegible] the building and engineering codes [illegible] Such [illegible] was [illegible] financial [illegible] were formed. It was believed many [illegible] could be brought forth to finance the [illegible] of the week.

Positive indications of increase in business volume would offset any tendency for security values to slump in the face of government competition for money, the association held.

Little Change Apparent in Business Conditions

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

DEVELOPMENTS OF THE PAST WEEK have thrown little new light on the future prospects for business. The normal period for seasonal improvement has passed without any change to indicate that business in most lines is even responding to seasonal stimuli.

The steel trade has continued to drift along with an average production only slightly in excess of 30 per cent of capacity. Prices are firm. While stocks of material in consumers' hands are low, there appears to be no desire to make purchases except for immediate needs.

Other lines of industrial activity show conditions similar to those in the steel trade. Business has not declined during recent weeks but it has failed to record seasonal gains which, for all practical purposes, is equivalent to a decline.

Oil Industry Stabilized

WITH THE RESUMPTION of production in the East Texas field, the oil industry has been settling into more normal operating conditions. The advancing tendencies of prices, which were apparent during the period of shutdown, have been checked. East Texas crude oil is now worth 72 cents a barrel. Production under the Texas Railroad Commission proration orders has expanded to about 400,000 barrels a day. This is greater than was generally expected, but it is still only a little more than half the peak level.

The Oklahoma fields are still closed. Gov. Alfalfa Bill Murray is holding out for $1 oil even though the resumption of operations in East Texas have materially dimmed the prospects for a prompt victory.

Foreign Situation Improved

LESS CONCERN ABOUT the foreign situation has been apparent during the past week. The extension of banking credits has solved most of the problems temporarily. Germany has ceased to hold the center of the stage while England has been taking drastic steps to cut expenses. The new economic program in England has been responsible for criticism in many parts of that country, but it is generally believed that the present government will be successful in its efforts.

A better tone was apparent in the stock market in this country during the latter part of the week. The downward movement appeared to have been checked yesterday. The offering of several new bond issues marked the first new financing of importance for over a month.

Anti-Trust Discussion

THE NUMBER OF PLANS for improving the business situation has reached deluge proportions. A large proportion of them has suggested temporary suspension or modification of the terms of the anti-trust laws. Industrial leaders in general are in favor of greater liberalization of the control of big business, but they are inclined to object to any new forms of regulation to accompany changes in the anti-trust laws.

The proposal of J. Rogers Flannery that a Federal Emergency Board be appointed to supervise business activity and to permit industry to disregard anti-trust laws to a sufficient extent to eliminate excessive price competition was not met with general approval since it was feared that such supervision would be difficult to get rid of after the present emergency is over.

U. S. HELD ABLE TO END TRADE DEADLOCK

Government Work Program With Long-Term Financing Seen as Slump Remedy

Universal Service

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—The gradual retreat of stock market averages back toward the June 2 levels tends to efface the advances based on the moratorium gesture.

On second sober thought, the financial community has rejected belief in relief from the depression by magic and is temporarily discouraged because there is no sign of any near-term acceptance of a program of economic recovery. The failure of current statistical indicators to reveal even customary seasonal improvement has discouraged the short-sighted trader but perhaps it brings the country nearer the stage where it will be in a mood to consider fundamental remedies.

Mr. Ruggeser

ACTIVITY NEEDED

In a word, the trouble with the economic society is idleness and the great need is activity. It goes without saying that the activity should be along socially useful lines. With private business men each waiting for the other to act, the Federal government has an opportunity to break the deadlock with a far-reaching program of public works to be financed through a long-term bond issue.

The current subnormal state of trade is a direct reflex of the prevailing spirit of timidity and hesitation. The socially useful man is the person of enterprise who will embark on job creating activities. The socially objectionable person is the one who withdraws his capital from production and hoards his resources.

U. S. BONDS PAR

With capitol temporarily scared, the demand at present is primarily for gilt edged issues. United States government securities represent par in the investment world, and present realities make it especially desirable for the Federal government to take the leadership in mobilizing capital and releasing it for economical and necessary public works, which will summon large numbers of persons from the ranks of the unemployed.

Much is heard nowadays about the lack of leadership. As a matter of fact, the business world is going through a major transition and in the process it will doubtless shed some of the former leaders who seem unable to cope with changing conditions. Under the surface doubtless a new leadership is developing, and before the process is over new personalities will appear in high places in the realm of corporate management. These will not be men who are chosen because of their social connections or because of their previous football fame, but because of their sheer ability, courage and capacity to buck adverse conditions.

SCHOOL OPENS FIFTIETH SESSION

Pittsburgh Academy Offers Many Specialized Courses; Annual Enrollment Large

With the opening of its fall term Pittsburgh Academy began its fiftieth year as a Pittsburgh educational institution. Steady growth has marked its history. The original institution, founded by J. Warren Lytle, had 20 students and four instructors. Today the annual enrollment is over 800 students with a proportionately large faculty.

Mr. Grady

James J. Grady, president of Pittsburgh Academy, declares that 140 men and women have completed their academic business training at this state accredited institution. These alumni have come from 161 cities and towns of Pennsylvania, from 37 states and from 11 foreign countries.

ADULT EDUCATION

While the minimum age for entrance is 16 years and fully 50 per cent of the students are under 21, Pittsburgh Academy has become known as a school which specializes in adult education. Its scholastic standing and the serious minded attitude of the faculty and student body towards the work of the institution has tended to attract the more mature type of student.

In addition to the regular academic and business courses Pittsburgh Academy has a large number of specialized courses which are not found in the average school. Among these courses are Practical Speaking, Typography and Layout, Direct Mail Advertising, Practical Selling, Retail Advertising and Life Insurance.

EXPERT FACULTY

Each of these special evening courses is given by an expert who is an outstanding member of the particular profession represented by the course.

Other evening courses are given in the psychology of self-development by Mr. Grady and in Practical Speaking by Prof. E. R. Moses, president of the Pittsburgh School of Speech and a well-known lecturer.

EVANS VETERAN TEACHER

Mr. Evans

A veteran instructor of Pittsburgh School of Accountancy has completed his period of steady [illegible] by an [illegible] to [illegible] subsidiary. For [illegible] Judge of the Court of Common Pleas.

Raymond D. Evans has had an extensive [illegible] legal background [illegible] since he entered [illegible] In field of law [illegible] at the age of 13 [illegible] as an office boy [illegible] for the firm of [illegible] Reed, Smith, Shaw & McClay. Mr. Evans studied law at night, attending the Academy of Pittsburgh Law School, graduating in 1908. He attended successively Allen Academy, Princeton University and law school, working every summer at his old post with Reed, Smith, Shaw and McClay.

At his graduation from law school Mr. Evans was commissioned a second lieutenant of infantry and engaged in the following major battles: Champagne-Marne, Aisne-Marne, Cote-Aisne and Argonne-Meuse.

His honorable discharge came May 18, 1919 and he immediately returned to his old firm, serving as law clerk until his admission to the Pennsylvania Bar in 1920.

Since that time Mr. Evans has followed the general practice of law and for the past five years has been Assistant United States Attorney for Western Pennsylvania.

For more than 25 years Mr. Evans has engaged in legal work, and even in his avocations he is legally inclined, since for almost a decade he has been one of Pittsburgh School of Accountancy's most popular instructors in law.

WEEKLY BANK CLEARINGS

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Bank clearings are even further reduced. The total for the five-day week ending with Thursday last at leading cities in the United States as reported to Dun's Review was only $4,813,084,000 and showed a decline of 40.8 per cent compared with the six-day week a year ago. The reduction this week from the preceding week was 27.2 per cent but on an average daily basis it was only 5.3 per cent not greater than normally appears. New York City contributed heavily to the decline. The total at that metropolis for the past five days amounted to only $3,160,187,000 which was 41.7 per cent below a year ago.

RADIO DEMAND IMPROVES

Retail sales this week have shown comparatively little change as compared with last week according to R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review. The volume of business is well below normal and confined largely to seasonal necessities.

Dry goods jobbers report sales largely for immediate needs and in small amounts. Shoe jobbers report sales almost entirely for filling-in purposes and to a very large extent demand is for the lower-priced shoes. There has been some increase in the demand for women's and children's fall wearing apparel, while men's clothing continues to move slowly. Radio distributors report an increase in demand, particularly for small low-priced sets. Automobile sales continue slow, but demand for replacement parts is quite active.

There has been no particular improvement in collections which continue to average slow.

Sir Squires Denies Sale of Labrador

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Sir Richard Squires, Prime minister of Newfoundland, arrived in New York yesterday from London with the announcement he had "borrowed" two British fiscal experts to aid in reorganizing the country's finances.

He denied that negotiations have been opened for the sale of Labrador to aid the Newfoundland treasury.

French Tireless Worker. Passes Grove in Labor. Tennis Title to Shift. Dreshar as Coach. Why Lomski Canceled. Horse Show's Advance.

ONLY EARNSHAW TOPS LARRY IN TOIL

WHO AMONG ALL the lefthanders in the two big baseball leagues has been the busiest pitcher or has done the greatest amount of work this season? "Foolish question," the average fan might be tempted to reply. "There's nothing to it but Bob Grove. Nobody is within a mile of him." But that's one place where the average fan would be wrong. Grove isn't the answer at all. The leading workhorse among the southpaws in the big show is none other than our own Larry French.

Larry French

The Pirate forkhander attained that distinction yesterday by going nine innings to beat the Giants and hang up his fourteenth victory of the season. His margin of leadership is hardly more than a thin whisker. It's the slightest shade that could possibly exist in a hurling race unless you cared to narrow the thing down to the number of balls pitched. For it's no more than one-third of an inning, according to unofficial records. But it gives French the leadership just the same and makes him the top southpaw of the year to date in point of aggregate toil.

LARRY HAD TO go the full route yesterday to put himself out in front, as up to that time Grove was leading him by eight and two-thirds innings. But the nine rounds he hurled against the McGrawites gave French a total of 259 innings pitched in 36 games for the season so far, whereas Grove's record shows 258 2-3 innings worked in 37 games for the A's.

And that isn't the only distinction that French holds. He leads all the pitchers in his own league, both righthanded and lefthanded, in number of innings pitched. Jumbo Elliott, of the Phillies, has participated in a greater number of games than any National League rival, having 42 to his credit, but in total innings French is running ahead of the whole pack, his nearest competitor being Silas Johnson, of the Reds, who has pitched 246 2-3 frames in 38 engagements.

THE LEADERS OF the other National League clubs are: Carl Hubbell, Giants, 237 2-3 innings in 34 games, just one inning ahead of Fred Fitzsimmons, Jumbo Elliott, Phillies, 233 1-3 in 47 games; Ed Brandt, Braves, 232 in 31 games; Charley Root, Cubs, 216 2-3 in 36 games; Bill Hallahan, Cardinals, 216 in 33 games, and Bill Clark, Robins, 208 in 30 games.

Just one man stands between French and the leadership of both leagues, and his margin over the Pirate is only three innings. He is George Earnshaw, of the A's, who has pitched 262 innings in 39 games. French cannot reach Ed Walsh's modern major league record of 464 innings, pitched in 1908, nor Joe McGinnity's National League mark of 434, set in 1903, but if he had the time and the opportunity he wouldn't shy at trying for it. There is no harder or more willing worker in the business.

THAT THE WITHDRAWAL of Bill Tilden made amateur tennis an open game in this country, just as the retirement of Bobby Jones made golf, was demonstrated yesterday in the national championship tournament in Forest Hills in the dethronement of Johnny Doeg, last year's champion. As a result two brand-new finalists take the courts to fight for the title today in Ellsworth Vines, Jr., of Pasadena, and George Lott, Jr., of Philadelphia. Neither name ever before appeared in the last round. Vines so far has run true to the original dope that he was the main threat to supplant Doeg as champion. The 19-year-old star has a hard battle on his hands today, but looks to have a slight edge if his great uphill fight to beat Fred Perry and eliminate the last foreign contender yesterday did not take too much out of him.

John Dreshar

AMONG THE FORMER local gridders starting out as coaches this year is John Dreshar, for three seasons a star center and guard at Carnegie Tech and captain of the Plaid eleven in 1929 and 1930. He is one of the assistant coaches at Western Reserve in Cleveland.

Karl Davis, athletic chief at Reserve, writes that Dreshar was the first to report, having arrived on the scene this week full of pep to help in completing arrangements for the beginning of practice by the varsity squad next Tuesday.

RESERVE MEN HAVE a lot of confidence in their coaching staff, which includes Tom Keady as head coach and Dreshar and Jiggs Donahue as assistants. Keady coached for nine years at Lehigh and beat Lafayette six times in nine games. That speaks for itself.

The first big objective of the coaches will be the game here with Pitt. They hope to have the team primed for its best exhibition of the early season on the occasion of the meeting with the Panthers here on October 17.

WHEN THE PITT eleven plays its first game at the Stadium against Miami two weeks from this afternoon, it will be interesting to note how well Coach Sutherland has adapted himself to the new practice restrictions and how far he has brought the Panthers along toward their usual starting condition with the stay in training camp cut down from three weeks to two. The benefits of three weeks' work at Windber always were a factor in helping the Blue and Gold get off to a good start. In this connection it might be remarked that Camp Hamilton is not a product of overemphasis in football. It is the summer camp of the University of Pittsburgh school of engineering, being used by the embryo engineers for 11 weeks each summer.

THE WITHDRAWAL OF Leo Lomski from his bout with Jack Dempsey, scheduled for Reno recently, is said to have been due to the advice of his former trainer, Ray Arcel. The latter trained Lomski when Leo was at his peak, and one of his prize possessions is a watch that Lomski gave him with a personal inscription.

When Arcel learned of the Dempsey-Lomski match he was on a train with Kid Francis bound for the coast. At the first stop he sent the following message to Lomski: "I don't believe you are in condition to face Dempsey, even in an exhibition. If you are not, please don't do it." Lomski took the tip and called off the bout.

COL. GEORGE H. CHERRINGTON, recently elected master of fox hounds of the Pittsburgh Hunt, and one of the club's organizers in 1926, is a logically prominent horseman, inasmuch as he is colonel of the 308th Cavalry, United States Army.

Col. G. H. Cherrington

Two of his mounts are being exhibited at the present show in the Fox Chapel district. They are Mitizi, champion of the 1926 show, and Lord Jim, a green hunter, shown for the first time this year.

IT IS POINTED out by Col. Cherrington that the setting of Fox Chapel show, which will continue through this afternoon, with 100 horses entered in 26 classes, has not been surpassed anywhere. "With the ring placed in the polo field," he says, "all jumps, over both outside and inside courses, are clearly visible to grandstand spectators as well as to those occupying parked cars. And the show ring itself is the last word in improvements, as with a double rail, in which the lines are three feet apart, there can be no extending of hands, with white gloves, that might frighten nervous horses. All around this year's exhibit has marked the most advanced point in horse show progress that Pittsburgh has ever attained."

DOEG FAILS IN DEFENSE OF CROWN

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 12 (AP)—Two sets down at one time and the sets rapidly playing out on him, Ellsworth Vines, Jr., Pasadena proved his fighting heart by coming back to defeat Frederick J. Perry, British ace, in five furious sets to enter the final of the Golden Jubilee National tennis tournament.

The 19-year-old Coast star today will have his chance at the title relinquished yesterday by John Hope Doeg, the Newark lefthander, who took a beating from George Lott, Jr., of Philadelphia, in the other semi-final, 7-5, 6-3, 6-0.

Vines, playing erratically, recovered to play good tennis and win, 4-6, 3-6, 6-4, 6-4, 6-3.

The final set saw the crowd of 12,000 in a constant uproar as Vines, increasing his pace, served with terrific speed. Two supremely confident young men fight it out for the title today.

HORSE SHOWS CARDED TODAY

The annual Pittsburgh Hunt Club Horse Show, in which approximately 100 thoroughbreds are competing, will be concluded at the Hunt grounds, in the Fox Chapel district, today.

Hundreds of admirers of hunters, jumpers and ponies are expected to witness the last-day program, which is as follows:

A horse show at Heath Manor, the estate of Mrs. F. H. Beegle, Patterson Heights, Beaver Falls, also is being staged today. Seventeen events are on the program, and the first is listed for 1:30 p. m. R. T. M. McCready, Rachel Catherine McCready, Albert Meyer, William Graham, Theodore F. Smiths and C. H. Beegles are exhibitors.

ARMY OFFICIALS VISIT PITT

Preliminary details pertaining to the staging of the Pitt-Army football game at the Stadium this fall were discussed this morning at a conference held in the Stadium offices by W. Don Harrison, director of athletics at the University of Pittsburgh, and Maj. Fleming, director of athletics at the United States Military Academy at West Point and Capt. Biff Jones. The Army officials arrived here this morning.

Bojarski Easy Winner Over Farr

ERIE, Pa., Sept. 12.—Frankie Bojarski, Erie junior-lightweight, added Johnny Farr, of Cleveland, to his list of victims here last night, completely outclassing the Cleveland veteran to win every round of a 10-round engagement. Farr was floored for a nine-count in the eighth round. Bojarski weighed 132, Farr 129½.

KEALLY BACK AS REFEREE

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor

Joe Keally is back in the ranks of the local boxing referees. The veteran arbiter from the North Side, who recently resigned his post, has asked to be placed back on the staff of the State Athletic Commission and his request has been granted by Commissioner Dr. W. D. McClelland.

Joe Keally

Keally, pal of Frank Moran, local heavyweight ace, in the latter's heyday, is a leading bill poster by trade and boxing is a sideline with him. When he resigned he felt he had had his fill of the sport, but the old urge to carry on proved more than he could resist, hence his re-entry into the fold.

Between Rounds

The Meyers Bowl has been trying to land an opponent for George Padua. Homestead heavyweight, and if successful, may top off its season with such an offering as the tussle between Victorio Campolo and Jose Santa have declined bids for the match.

Joe (Bull) Dubransky, manager of boxers and announcer of sports events at McKeesport, will be married next Monday at St. Stephen's Magyar Church. The bride is Marian Anglosi, of Newark, N. J., and formerly of Connellsville.

Jules Heck, matchmaker of the Meyers Bowl, is at work on the preliminaries for his Wizer-Joe West-Paul Pirrone middleweight show, to be staged next Wednesday night. Bill Hummer, Hickey Park matchmaker, is shaping his program for the Frankie Bojarski-Andy Martin melee, which will top off his show Thursday night. Eddie Hepner will box Benny McArthur in the eight-round semi-final. Jim McGirr, of McKeesport, who planned to open his indoor season in the Palisades Rink Thursday night, may hold off an additional week. He is looking for an opponent for Tiger Joe Randall in the main event.

The W. P. I. A. L. decisions committee was slated to hold a meeting in the Fort Pitt Hotel this morning. Matters appertaining to the forthcoming football season, particularly eligibility, are to be taken up.

BROIDA REACHES NET FINAL

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN
Staff Correspondent.

GREENSBURG, Pa., Sept. 12.—Morning and afternoon racquet sessions offer prospect of keen action as the first annual Greensburg Country Club invitation tennis conclave approaches a weekend climax on the G. C. C. clay rectangles today. Semi-final combat in all divisions of play will feature the Saturday card, and it is possible that the women's singles final also will be reeled off, provided that the survivor of the Helen Carson-Rose Straub penultimate affair at high noon is not too fatigued to engage in the windup tussle later.

Frank Broida, holder of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Pittsburgh Public Parks titles for 1930 and 1931, sprang spectacular upset in man-to-man singles semi-final fray yesterday by battling up from the rear to thump Sam Cohn, brilliant Beckley stylist, 1-6, 6-2, 6-1. The summary:

MEN'S SINGLES

Fourth round—Frank Broida, Pittsburgh, won from Dr. David L. O'Loughlin, Pittsburgh, by default.

Semi-final round—Frank Broida, Pittsburgh, defeated Sam Cohn, Beckley, W. Va., 1-6, 6-2, 6-1.

WOMEN'S SINGLES

Second round—Rose Straub, Johnstown, defeated Vida Hurst, Pittsburgh, 3-6, 6-1, 6-3.

Semi-final round—Frances Grimes, Morgantown, defeated Miriam Sullivan, Pittsburgh, 6-3, 2-6, 6-4.

MEN'S DOUBLES

First round—Sam Cohn and Aubrey Smith Beckley, W. Va., won from Albert Heacox and William Zeiders, Greensburg, by default; Bradford Booth and John A. McLaine, Pittsburgh, defeated Joe Brown and Charles Copeland, Greensburg, 6-4, 6-3; Charles Maits and Frank Broida, Pittsburgh, won from Dr. McKelvey and Robert Kneedler, Greensburg, by default; John R. Brown, Mt. Lebanon, and William S. Ramsay, Uniontown, defeated Edgar T. Hammer and Theodore Hammer, Greensburg, 6-4, 7-9, 6-4; Sam Hibbs and Robert Hardy, Greensburg, won from Dr. David L. O'Loughlin and Dr. John L. O'Loughlin, Pittsburgh, by default.

Second round—Sam Cohn and Aubrey Smith Beckley, W. Va., won from Dillinger Hixson and partner, Greensburg, by default; Malcolm Hay and Charles Evans, Pittsburgh, won from Sam Hibbs and Robert Hardy, Greensburg, by default.

PIRATES BUY PITCHER

The Pirate management has announced the purchase of Pitcher John Niggeling, of the Des Moines Club, of the Western League. Des Moines is in the race for the Western League flag honors and the recruit will not report until next spring.

Niggeling, a righthander, is aged 26, about 6 feet tall and weighing 175. He has won 16 and lost 11 games, but probably is at least two years removed from big-league classification.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Mrs. Payne Whitney's Twenty Grand, co-holder of the 3-year-old title with A. C. Bostwick's Mate, will try to add $25,000 to his earnings in the eighteenth running of the Lawrence Realization at Belmont Park today at a mile and five furlongs.

NET TOURNEY OPENS

The Allegheny Country Club invitation tennis tourney gets under way today. Competition will be confined to men's doubles, 16 teams, including several of the leading pairs of the district, being slated to play.

WOOD TO RACE DON ABROAD

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—(AP)—A tentative "feeler" from a London paper as to whether Gar Wood, speed boat pilot, would be willing to race Kaye Don, British speedster, on the other side of the Atlantic, brought an emphatic affirmative from Wood today.

"Gladly," he wired the editor of the Sunday Chronicle, who had sent him this message:

"Are you prepared to race Kaye Don on a suitable course this side of the Atlantic if satisfactory arrangements can be made?"

Wood told newspaper men today that by making certain improvements on his Miss America IX he hoped to have the fastest boat in the world before the snow flies. He also declared he was building a new boat.

Wood reiterated previous denials that there was any trickery on his part in the second heat of the Harmsworth trophy race September 7 on the Detroit River, when Miss America IX crossed the starting line more than 9 seconds ahead of the gun. Don in his Miss England II streaked after him, seven seconds ahead of the gun. The British boat later overturned and sank and both crafts were disqualified.

NOT CAUGHT IN WASH

DETROIT, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Motion pictures of the second Harmsworth race in which Kaye Don's Miss England II sank, displayed here publicly for the first time today, show Miss England in the straightaway and not in Gar Wood's wash when the accident happened. The pictures were taken from a tall building almost directly over the spot where the boat foundered.

SAINTS CLINCH TITLE

ST. PAUL, Sept. 12.—(AP)—St. Paul virtually assured itself of the American Association pennant by defeating Milwaukee, 8 to 7, in 12 innings yesterday. The Saints now lead Kansas City by 17 games.

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Due to corresponding triumphs on the part of the Cubs and Robins, their rivals for a money berth, the Pirates today realized they had gained no ground, so to speak, as they plastered the Giants with a 3-to-2 setback yesterday.

There was a new note of optimism in the Pittsburgh clubhouse, nevertheless, the cause of the brightness being a fine young fellow named Ben Sankey, who hails from Alabama. Ben had to jump into Tom Thevenow's shoes when the regular shortfielder went out with a broken ankle. Sankey did not get away very successfully, but he found himself in competition with the New Yorkers, so much so that his bat practically won the ball game.

Ben, however, will have to share the hero honors with Larry French and Tony Piet. Laughing Larry won his fifth victory of the season over the New Yorkers, but he had to drive in the winning run, with two out in the eighth, to achieve the merry result. Piet singled and swiped the middle bag before Larry sent him over the home dish with a pretty hit to center.

FAREWELL TODAY

The two clubs are set to stage their last battle of the season this afternoon. Ervin Brame is ready to twirl for the Oaklanders, Acting Manager Dave Bancroft, of the Giants, has Jim Mooney and Clarence Mitchell available. There is a strong likelihood of Mooney drawing the slab ticket. The young lefthander owns six victories without a defeat.

The Giants were as mad as a wet hen when Piet tallied in the eighth. Captain Travis Jackson and his mates insisted that Jackson had nailed Tony in the latter's steal of second.

The Polish recruit singled to center in the eighth with one out, and the score tied at 2-all. Tony streaked to second with Sankey up and the jam play resulted. Jackson took Hogan's low throw out of the dirt, apparently he juggled the ball momentarily, yet he claimed, and with much vigor, that he had retired the Pirate

Says Nick Altrock

(Baseball's Comedian)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—The experts can stop worrying about the difference in the major league baseballs.

Nick Altrock

This year the National loop put a thicker skin on its sphere, which made it a rhinoceros instead of a rabbit ball. But in the charity game this week against the Giants, the Yanks were helpless, while their own apple was being pitched, and socked it all over the park when the loaded National ball was rung in. In this World Series, the National ball may be deadlier if Burleigh Grimes tries to dust off Mickey Cochrane like he did last year, but an American League apple is no snowball, either, if it hits you on the conk. When a World Series pitcher is getting wobbly, one thirty-second of an inch difference in the baseball cover doesn't make any diff.

By JESS CARVER

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., Sept. 12.—The leakages attending the installation of the big white system of intercollegiate athletics are ravaging right along here at old Penn State, but are failing signally to get the boys down. The same beatific shines adorn the faces of the merry gents of the coaching staff and there is more downright pep, dash and fire on the squad this year than there has been for a decade.

Football, basketball, track, boxing, in short, all athletics at State are offered absolutely nothing to induce them to exist here. Scholarships are a thing of the past. There is no training table nor is there any system of charge accounts at restaurants. The game here is strictly simon-pure. Either you pay your own way and all of it, or you stay out.

Naturally, the system is making it very tough on the sports teams, especially in football and basketball. The candidates for the varsity and freshman squads are candidates because they want to attend Penn State above all other schools and because they want to play on State teams. If you knew the coaches and officials here as well as I know 'em you'd understand why State gets as many athletes as it does.

BLUES CHORUS GONE

The situation here this year might be termed exceedingly dark by folks better fixed in athletic wealth but along with the scholarship-fixed athlete went the blues chorus. Bob Higgins isn't squawking either for publication or in the peace and quiet of the locker rooms, where men are men, whether they have a hole or two in their socks or not. State lost a flock of veterans from the '30 squad, 11 in all, and has only six on hand around which to construct a Lion team.

The Lions will have a fair amount of speed, a camparatively hefty line between the tackles and a backfield led by the hard-hitting George Lasich, the team's captain. The backfield must be rebuilt, for Deidrich, French, Joe Miller and Evans, regulars last year, have gone the way of all boys who know other uses for a book besides a door-stop.

Lasich could make most any ball club. He's coming along right well and is a good enough pass receiver. George Collins, who was out of school last year and the year before, and the veteran Moonves also ineligible last fall, are leading halfback candidates. Irwin Jackson, Ott Rader, Suhach, Wantshouse, Wille and Harper, all sophomores, will scrap it out for the reserve jobs.

SNYDER AT QUARTERBACK

Bob Snyder, who did considerable quarterbacking last year, appears to be headed for the starting job this fall. Thomas, a promising sophomore, and another Snyder boy, Andy, will serve as understudies to Bob. Snyder is a fine passer and for all his lack of weight, he only goes about 165, backs up the line very creditably.

The wing jobs still are open with Tommy Slusser, former Schenley High School star, and Grimshaw out in front in the race for the jobs. Brewster, a holdover from last year, and Capen Hardy, Myers, Rosenberg and Houk, sophomores, complete the terminal list.

The tackle situation is fairly promising with Stempeck and McMillen on the job both lettermen, Bedoski, Cole, Coll, Hesch, Schlaak and Shields and Johnny Wahl from Beaver Falls may be used either as tackles or guards.

Speaking of guards, Gillard, who weighs 210 pounds and won a letter as a tackle a year back, and Curry, a letter winner last year, are regarded as the most promising bets for the [illegible] Anderson, Barr, Baldwin, [illegible] Woolridge and Wentzel complete the list of afternoon lads who'd like to be in there beside the center.

The snapperback will be chosen from among Torrance, Zawacki, Jack Anderson and Kerr DeCindus who made his S as a center in 1930, failed to return to school this fall. Zawacki and Torrance appear to be the class of the field. All need experience.

A tentative line-up, selected by Coach Higgins as he took his shower after yesterday's workout, went something like this:

Ends, Grimshaw and Slusser; tackles, Stempeck and McMillen; guards, Gillard and Curry; center, Zawacki or Torrance; backs, Snyder, Collins, Moonves and Lasich.

HIGGINS CHANGES SYSTEM

Higgins has changed his system about no little. He's working with a military huddle much to the order of the one popularized by Chick Meehan of New York University and the one Syracuse employs at times. His team is going to get by on speed and deception because the power simply isn't there in full enough quantities to make tip-smashing football practical. You'll probably see a lot of forward passing.

The schedule is tough for 11 elevens such as State enjoys. Waynesburg is to be met in the opener, Lebanon Valley comes next and then the first tough one with Temple. Following this contest is somewhat of a breather with Dickinson and after that Higgins must nurse and prime his club for Syracuse, Pitt, Colgate, Lafayette and West Virginia, in a row.

The coaching staff remains intact and continues to hold the title of being the best looking in the district. Assisting Higgins are Messrs. Dutch Hermann, Larry Conover, Joe (Sugar) Bedenk, Marty McAndrews, Joe Miller, Allie Morrison and Mike Zaia and Trainer Leo Houck. Leo in turn is ably assisted by Charles (Spider) who doubles as wrestling coach and ran put a team through a more varied and devilish layout of setting-up exercises than the Tiller girls ever dreamed of.

A tip to all State opponents—you had better count on a tough afternoon.

FULLBACK GEORGE LASICH . . . HE'S THE CAPTAIN

Lasich is a former Clairton High School star and is expected to have a big season with the Bob Higgins-coached crew. He is the team's outstanding backfield player.

SCOTT TO OPEN THURSDAY

By JULIUS LEVIN

Scott High School of North Braddock will usher in the local scholastic football season next Thursday night at the Scott Field when it clashes with Scottdale High School. The contest originally scheduled for Friday night was moved up to avoid a conflict with the Duquesne-Geneva night battle at Forbes Field. All other home games on the Scott program will be played Friday nights.

Johnny Reed, coach of the North Braddock grinders, has a fine squad working out for the inaugural battle. While he lost a lot of good men last spring, the fine quality of the newcomers indicates that Scott will make a strong bid for the district championship.

Harry M. Springer, coach at Allegheny High School, who developed championship basketball and football teams at Bellevue and Wilkinsburg in the early days of the W. P. I. A. L., should have a smooth-working grid machine this Fall. Springer has a fair list of lettermen back from last season. Among them are Leonard and Vaughn, backs; Reiley, a center, and Crones, Thompson and Folmer, guards. Springer, assisted by Nelson F. Miller, is whipping the squad into shape for the opener with Beaver Falls at Beaver Falls on September 26. The following Friday, Allegheny clashes with Allerdice.

HEAT CURTAILS GRID DRILLS OF LOCALS

CAMP HAMILTON WINDBER, Pa., Sept. 12.—The Panthers went through another smashing scrimmage this morning and after heavy work were awarded with an afternoon's sojourn in nearby Windber. The turf on practice field has been more like a desert than a football field. Today's half-holiday comes as a most welcome relief.

Bobby Hogan, up and coming sophomore quarterback, was again at the helm of the varsity and showed improvement over his earlier efforts.

Zola Alpert and Rocco Cutri took turns piloting the second team.

This morning's scrimmage was run off with Heller and Reider at the halves, Hogan at quarter and Clark at the fullback post. A fullback and Alpert and Cutri, quarters, will replace the first string men during the latter portions of the work. On the line Capt. Hirshberg and Collins will be at the terminals, Quatse and McMurdo at the tackles, Milligan and Morris at the guard positions, and Tormey at center.

HEAT AFFECTS TECH

Plainly affected by the terrific heat, Carnegie Tech's football players suffered through the workouts yesterday, although they were excused early from both the morning and afternoon session by the coaching staff.

The men have lost so much weight during the last several days that yesterday's scrimmage was confined to small bits of demonstration of the new plays under actual game conditions.

Coach Steffen had planned a real sham battle for this morning between a varsity team and an eleven selected from Paul Allison's Plebes, who are starting to gather in camp.

Bert Pomroy, who has been classified as a guard for two seasons despite his 160 pounds, was moved to the varsity backfield yesterday, supplanting for a time at least, Clyde Heimer.

LAYDEN PUSHES DUKES

The Dukes will not go through their drills today with the hope of a Sunday respite. Head coach Elmer Layden has decreed that his Night Riders have not yet reached the point where the polishing process can begin and for that reason every minute must be used in preparation for the local season opener next Friday night.

The big development of yesterday's drills was the great showing of Al DeLuca, Blairsville sophomore, who shined as a star halfback ball carrier in scrimmage.

FAIRMONT NINE IN TOUGH SPOT

FAIRMONT, W. Va., Sept. 12.—The Fairmont Club of the Middle Atlantic League had a hot time of it yesterday.

The suits of the players were attached by Frank Ice, sporting goods store owner, for a back account and suits were borrowed from the State Teachers' College.

Then several of the Charleroi players refused to play because a crowd of only 50 was on hand and the club had not been paid its guarantee. The game was called off, the umpire announcing that the matter of forfeiting the contest was up to President Elmer M. Daily.

The Charleroi Club was notified that its scheduled doubleheader in Youngstown today had been called off because the Youngstown club could not obtain the park for the day.

Scottdale took the measure of Youngstown, 8 to 5, and Cumberland and Wheeling split their double bill yesterday. Wheeling won the initial tilt, 3 to 2, but was whitewashed in the second, 5 to 0.

Charleston blanked Johnstown, 4 to 0. Beckley beat Clarksburg, 4 to 2, and Huntington topped Beaver Falls, 4 to 3.

FIELD CLUB RISKE STOPS MOROCK

By VERN SWARTSFAGER

Mrs. J. A. Ellen and William Farquhar, club champion, won the mixed foursome contest at the Pittsburgh Field Club. Barbara Warmcastle retained her women's club championship at the same links and John Graham, of South Hills and Oakmont, and Mrs. C. I. Wendt, of the Field Club, had low gross in a mixed foursome invitation at the Highland Country Club yesterday.

Farquhar and Mrs. Ellen had a gross 88 to top all the Field Club. Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Curles and W. N. Steitz and Edna Diebold deadlocking for low net with 79s.

Barbara Warmcastle eliminated Mary Kuhn, 7 and 6, in their 18-hole match for the Field Club championship.

Graham and Mrs. Wendt had a gross 79 at Highland then 76 net also giving them the low honors in that competition.

Ken Witherow has been named general chairman for the city open tourney to be held at Schenley Park, October 5. Bob Graham and John Jay Burke, publicity directors. Tom O'Keefe and Eddie Kunold, official scorers. Frank and Andy Petrulis and Doc Morry Carter, the finance committee. A. G. Wallerstedt will be secretary-treasurer.

flash. Umpire Ted McGrew decided in favor of the Pirates and after Phillips fanned, French poked a hit to center to score Piet.

LARRY'S SUPPORT WOBBLES

Sankey's furious three-bagger to the rightfield wall in the second was the pivotal punch in the two runs made in the inning by the Reds. P. Waner walked to open the round and he was on second with one out when Ben socked the ball to the wall. Phillips came through with a single to right and Sankey tallied.

Sankey's fumble of Marshall's grounder in the fifth opened the way for a Giant run, although the Giants would have been held scoreless in the inning if Piet and P. Waner had not collided on Leach's fly, which fell for a single to score Vergez. Johnny opened the inning with a single and both runners were safe when Marshall hit to Sankey. The Giants tied the battle up in the eighth on Terry's infield hit and Jackson's fine double to left.

East Huntingdon High Gridders Win

Reliance Life captured the Commercial and Industrial League baseball championship last evening by defeating the Riecks, 7 to 3, at Magee Field. Although he weakened momentarily in the third inning, Spencer hurled well for the victors. Quider and Murphy were the heavy hitters.

Book Shoe and Dormont battled to another tie, 6-all, in the third game of their City League titular series, at the Dormont High school field. Book led for five innings, 2 to 1, but both teams hit well in the sixth and the slugfest wound up in a tie tally.

THE ROAD BACK

By Erich Maria Remarque

Weary Germans See Yankees And Realize Defeat Was Inevitable

CHAPTER III.

Roads stretch far through the landscape, the villages lie in a gray light; trees rustle, leaves are falling, falling.

Along the road, step upon step, in their faded, dirty uniforms, tramp the gray columns. The unshaved faces beneath the steel helmets are haggard, wasted with hunger and long peril, pinched and dwindled to the lines drawn by terror and courage and death. They trudge along in silence; silently as they have now marched over so many a road, have sat in so many a truck, squatted in so many a dugout, crouched in so many a shell hole—without many words; so too now they trudge along this road back home into peace. Without many words.

Old men with beards and youths scarce 20 years of age comrades without difference. Beside them their lieutenants little more than children, yet the leaders of many a night raid. And, behind them the army of shame. Thus they tramp onward, step by step sick half-starving, without ammunition in their companies with eyes that still fail to comprehend it, escaped out of that underworld on the road back into life.

The company is marching slowly, for we are tired and have wounded with us. Little by little our group falls behind. The country is hilly and when the road climbs we can see from the summit the last of it, our own weapons glass over them. But around them lie the quiet fields, and the tree tops in their autumnal colors tower solemn and unconcerned above the oncoming flood.

We stopped for the night in a little village. Behind the houses in which we billeted flows a stream lined with willows. A narrow path runs beside it. One behind another in a long file troops withdrawing before us and behind us the dense endless columns that follow after. They are Americans. They pour on through the avenues of trees like a broad river.

AMERICANS FRIENDLY

Kosole walks in front. Behind him runs Wolf, the company mascot, and sniffs at his haversack.

Suddenly at the crossroad, where the path opens into the high road, Ferdinand springs back.

"Look out!"

On the instant our rifles are up, and we scatter. Kosole crouches in the ditch by the roadside ready to fire. Jupp and Troske duck and spy out from behind a clump of elders; Willy Homever lugs at his hand grenade belt; even our wounded are ready for fight.

Along the road are coming a few Americans. They are laughing and talking together. It is an advance patrol that has overtaken us. Adolf Bethke alone has remained unperturbed. He advances calmly a few paces clear of the cover. Kosole gets up again. The rest of us recover ourselves also, and, embarrassed and sheepish, readjust our belts and our rifle slings—for, of course, fighting has ceased some days now.

At sight of us the Americans halt suddenly. Their talk stops. Slowly they approach. We retire against a shed to cover our backs and wait. The wounded men we place in the middle.

After a minute's silence an American, tall as a tree, steps out from the group, stands before us and, beckoning, greets us.

"Hello, Kamerad!"

Adolf Bethke takes his hand in like manner. "Kamerad!" The tension relaxes. The Americans advance. A moment later and we are surrounded by them. Hitherto we have seen them so closely only when they were either prisoners or dead.

A GREAT CONTRAST

It is a strange moment. We gaze at them in silence. They stand about us in a semi-circle, fine, powerful fellows, clearly they have always had plenty to eat. They are all young, not one of them is nearly so old as Adolf Bethke or Ferdinand Kosole, and they are not our oldest by a long chalk. On the other hand none is so young as Albert Troske or Karl Broger, and they are by no means the youngest of us.

Synopsis

Ernst, who enlisted in the war when a schoolboy, is telling the story of a handful of friends—the remnant of a platoon. Rumors of peace have reached them, unsettling the men's minds. In a last brush with the enemy Wessling, one of the group, is mortally wounded and gives Ernst his watch just before he dies. Then peace is declared and the men march out. A strange feeling of futility overwhelms them. The war seems to have fizzled out ingloriously. So many dead and crippled, so much suffering, and to what end? What lies ahead for the survivors?

Now Go On

Bank Vault Looted, President Sought

CHICAGO, Sept. 12.—(AP)—The vault of the closed First Italian State Bank, expected to contain about $200,000 in cash, was opened and police said was found to have been emptied of all but $9,000.

A search was ordered by the state's attorney's office for Saverio Ariani, the bank's president who disappeared after being told by the bank examiners Tuesday that the institution would be closed the next day unless new capital were forthcoming.

Student Near Death After Being Hazed

MENOMONIE, Wis., Sept. 12.—(AP)—Lloyd Aune, freshman at Stout Institute, was reported by physicians as near death from injuries received when he was allegedly hazed by upper classmen.

School officials said Aune was met by a group of upper classmen near the campus. There was a fight and Aune was thrown to the street. He was injured at the base of the neck, causing paralysis.

CONGRESSMEN URGE RELIEF LOAN PLAN

Crowds Laud Kelly, Swing For Backing 5 Billion Prosperity Band Issue

SEATTLE, Sept. 12.—"Every resource of the government should be mobilized to meet the greatest national emergency since the war," Congressman Clyde Kelly, of Pittsburgh, again declared in voicing his hearty support of the $5,000,000,000 prosperity bond issue suggested by William Randolph Hearst. He added:

"The mere announcement that the Government intended to face the situation and issue these bonds would do more than anything else in reviving public confidence and stimulating private enterprise.

"With 7,000,000 men out of work we must realize the gravity of the conditions that exist. Prompt action is necessary. Congress does not meet until December, but an announcement that the Government would pledge its resources to wipe out the specter of unemployment would work wonders."

Kelly, accompanied by Mrs. Kelly and their daughter, Mary Jane, has been attending conventions of postal employes in San Francisco and Los Angeles and was greeted by a number of federal employes meeting in Seattle.

CROWD LAUDS PLAN

LAGUNA BEACH, Cal., Sept. 12.—(Universal)—Congressman Phil D. Swing was enthusiastically applauded by an audience of 200 prominent men and women from all parts of Orange County at a meeting here when he declared that the prosperity loan plan advocated by William Randolph Hearst offers the only solution for the unemployment problem. He said:

"We have aided Europe through a bold stroke of President Hoover. A bold stroke by our President now in behalf of our own country would be a splendid thing. The Federal Government is the only agency that can direct effort on a scale large enough to meet such an emergency as this.

"The only feasible plan that I have heard suggested is that of a $5,000,000,000 prosperity loan. There is an immense amount of public work to be done in this country, work for which plans are ready or almost ready.

"The government today can get plenty of money at the lowest interest in the history of the country. It is the best time we have ever had to construct public works of all kinds, and we will get more for the money expended. But the more important reason is that providing work on a large scale and putting billions into circulation will start things on the upgrade for a return to normal economic conditions."

MAN IN PRISON, WIFE SUES

Charging her husband, now in Sing Sing prison, deserted her on their wedding day, Mrs. Melva G. Gilmore, 221 Locust street, Mt. Oliver, filed a divorce suit against Harry J. Gilmore in Common Pleas Court. They were married March 1, 1919.

William Calvin Clark, 909 Irwin avenue, charged cruelty and indignities in his divorce action against Grace Clark, 2587 West Carson street. They were married August 4, 1930.

Ernest B. Shelton, 821 Third street, Versailles, asked a divorce from Bertha F. Shelton, Eden park, McKeesport, on the grounds of cruelty and indignities. They were married October 3, 1921.

Foiled in Suicide, Succeeds in Jail

GRAFTON, W. Va., Sept. 12.—(AP)—Opha Gobel, 44, of Rosemont, jailed because he was believed to be insane, hanged himself in the Taylor County jail with his handkerchief tied to a crossbar. He was brought to the jail after a daughter reported he had tried to kill himself at his home with a knife.

Cab Driver Fined For Tearing Up Tag

Joe Lyman, 29, of 320 South Highland avenue, a cab driver, blocked traffic, police say, in William Penn way yesterday and was given a traffic violation tag. Driving on, the arresting officer said Lyman tore it up and hurled the bits into the street. In Central Police Court today, Lyman was told to choose between $5 fine or five days in jail by Magistrate Thomas D. Jones.

5 Die as Plane Hits Submerged Wreck

NATAL, Brazil, Sept. 12.—(INS)—Four passengers and the pilot of a regular passenger hydroplane bound from Natal to Brazil were killed today when the plane crashed and exploded while taking off from the Potengy River. The plane struck the submerged wreck of an old ship. A mechanic, sole survivor of the five persons in the plane, was seriously injured.

Four Men Indicted On Arson Charges

MEADVILLE, Pa., Sept. 12.—(AP)—L. L. Kaufman, Frank Girardot, Henry Cornell and Thomas Shock were indicted on arson charges. The four Erie men were alleged to be involved in the operations of an arson ring in Northwestern Pennsylvania.

Cyclist Hurled Into Haystack After Bee Sting

CHARLEROI, Pa., Sept. 12.—A bee flew up the sleeve of Peter Amis, 22, Monessen, while he was speeding on a motorcycle at 55 miles an hour near here. The bee stung him.

At that Peter is a lucky fellow. When he lost control and went off the road he was hurled from the cycle and alighted in a haystack. He was only slightly hurt.

GANDHI NEAR ENGLISH SHORE

BOULOGNE, France, Sept. 12.—(INS)—Mahatma M. K. Gandhi, journeying to London for the round table conference, sailed for Folkestone at 11:15 a. m. today aboard the channel steamer Biarritz. The Indian Nationalist leader had arrived here a short while previously from Marseilles.

Gandhi arrived at Boulogne in a downpour of rain, but hundreds of admirers turned out to meet him. He refused proffered umbrellas, wrapping his homespun shawl about his thin shoulders as he walked from the train to the waiting channel boat. He told interviewers:

"I am too near England to make a statement."

FOLKESTONE, Eng., Sept. 12.—(INS)—The harbor of Folkestone was closed to all outsiders today pending the arrival of Mahatma M. K. Gandhi from France. The step was taken to forestall any demonstrations.

ASSAILS G. O. P. PROMISES

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Former Gov. Robert A. Cooper of South Carolina, broadcast last night over the Dixie radio network the contention that the present national administration is either unwilling or incapable of dealing with existing problems.

Reviewing the business trend since the 1928 election, he said the Republican campaign in that year was one of "promises" adding:

"In 1932 it will be a campaign of explanations and excuses."

Cooper asked if the Republican presidential candidate next year will say:

"Our present economic distress is a backwash of the World War, world wide in extent and beyond the control of any government.

"If so we will remind him that the World War ended in 1918, and surely within 10 years the leadership of the Republican party should have been able to discover the inevitable effects of the world-wide calamity."

HUGE OIL BLAZE PERILS TOWN

WESTCHESTER, Pa., Sept. 12.—(AP)—Firemen early today brought under control a freak fire which last night threatened to destroy a section of the town. The blaze originated in Goose Creek, which had been covered with oil from a leaking tank of road oil on its banks.

The fire fighters concentrated on saving property on the creek banks and were busy extinguishing blazes which broke out on roofs after flames in the creek leaped skyward.

Four large oil tanks caught fire and many smaller tanks of oil and gasoline exploded. Damage was estimated at more than $40,000.

All except the large tanks have been extinguished. Firemen and oil company officials believed these would burn dry by early Sunday. No effort to extinguish them was made.

A series of 24 weekly programs devoted to New England apples has been arranged to be broadcast over stations WBZ and WBZA, of Springfield and Boston. The time of the program is 11:15 a. m. Lewis says New England's apple crop represents a total value of $12,000,000 annually.

JUVENILE HOME FAVORED BY CANDIDATES

Armstrong and Coyne, Answering Quiz, Cite Work for Building Project

A favorable attitude on the part of candidates for County Commissioner toward the erection of a new Juvenile Detention Home was indicated in their replies to a request for a declaration by the Allied Boards of Trade.

Joseph G. Armstrong, incumbent, said:

"I am heartily in sympathy with the erection of a juvenile detention home building, and had a bill prepared at the last session of the Legislature by Judge MacFarlane. It was presented to both Houses and placed upon the Governor's desk.

"Some members of the home's board, appointed by the court, had influence enough with the Governor to have it vetoed, and it does not appear to me as those members are in harmony with your board."

Senator James J. Coyne declared:

"The records of the last Legislature will show that I supported and advocated the bill authorizing the erection of a new home. The bill failed of passage."

Senator William D. Mansfield declared in favor of the home and Commissioner C. C. McGovern said he had previously issued statements fully explaining his attitude on the subject.

A resolution, asking the statements, was adopted by the executive committee of the trade body September 1. C. V. Shoup, secretary, sent copies of the resolution to the commissioners.

BADLY HURT IN STREET FIGHT

Francis McGuire, 30, of 16 Third avenue, was in Allegheny General Hospital in a critical condition today, suffering from a fractured skull incurred when he was knocked to the street during a fight early today in Evans way, near Liberty avenue. His head is believed to have hit the curb.

His alleged assailant, C. A. Feller, 36, of 1231 Palo Alto street, a cab driver, was held without bail in Central Police Court by Magistrate Thomas D. Jones today, pending the outcome of McGuire's injuries.

Police said ill-feeling has existed between the men for some time. They met, police say, in Evans way early today.

SEATTLE, Sept. 12.—(AP)—A 30-hour week and starting salary of not less than $1,500 a year for all adults in government service were urged here at the bi-ennial convention of the National Federation of Federal Employes.

From several resolutions covering a shorter working week, the one presented by the New Orleans delegates was reported favorably by the Legislative Committee and adopted.

The resolution urged the short week as a remedy for the "grave and practically world-wide condition of distress resulting from over-production and unemployment."

ZERMATT, Switzerland.—(INS)—Plus fours have become the most popular costume of the women around these mountain regions having been tested and found to be the most practical as well as becoming of all mountain wear. Patterned after the well-cut breeches which used to form part of the equipment of the woman climber these plus fours are coming out in striking color combinations and are sold ready-made in all of the little shops. The English idea of shorts has also caught on and a number of women are adopting these. They are not, however, as suitable for high and chilly altitudes.

Fanchon Explains Deception To the Carstairs

CHAPTER XXVII

Up this tableau burst Collin, running from his room, a bathrobe over his pajamas, his feet bare. He took in the surface situation at a glance. Fanchon, pale, ice cold with determination, the revolver in her steady hand. Mrs. Carstairs sitting upright in bed, the clothes tossed about her, her lips set, her eyes bright with outrage. "Gilli," their late guest, still in the romantic costume, an overcoat partly concealing it, standing against the dresser, his hands held high, his lips curved to a sneer, and on the dresser the open jewel case.

"Give me the gun, Evelyn," said Collin quietly, and "telephone for the police."

There was no telephone extension in Jennie's bedroom. That much privacy she demanded. She had been regretting it for the last few minutes.

"Evelyn!" asked Tony, speaking for the first time. He laughed. "Stand still, Fanchon," he ordered sharply, "and make your explanations, and then we'll see if Mrs. Carstairs will be so anxious to bring the police into this."

"What do you mean?" asked Jennie, as Collin's face darkened with angry blood, "by speaking to my niece in such a fashion?"

"She is not your niece," Tony said coolly. "She planned this coup with me. But it didn't quite come off." His eyes went to Fanchon in an unmistakable expression of menace, mixed with a certain sardonic triumph. "She feared possibly to exchange the easy flesh pots for the uncertain existence of a gangster's girl," said Tony.

"What the hell is this all about?" demanded Collin.

Fanchon spoke then. She spoke with extreme quiet. She said:

"This situation is absurd. We aren't getting anywhere. Collin, take—take Tony into the library. And then I'll tell you the truth. After that you can decide what to do with him—and with me."

"What truth?" asked Mrs. Carstairs quietly. She spoke, reaching for her robe and slippers. Her face had aged terribly but her voice was low and her expression had not changed. Fanchon's heart went out to her on a wave of sorrowful love and admiration. But she dared not look at Collin again as she answered.

WELCOME NEWS

"The truth about myself. He is quite right. I am not your niece. I am not Evelyn Howard. I am Fanchon Meredith."

"Not—Evelyn?" gasped Collin.

Had she looked at him then she would have seen that a flash of most incredulous joy swept over his face, blotting out the amazement. Then the amazement returned. He darted a look at Tony, who, hands still high, leaned against the dresser.

Tony smiled evilly. Nothing was apparent in Collin's face now but sheer male anger.

"I'm getting rather tired of this position," said Tony blandly.

"Wait a moment." Fanchon stepped forward. She put her hands on Tony. She loathed touching him—tonight. But she felt in his overcoat pocket, she took out a wicked looking gun and kept it in her hand.

Now," she said to Collin, "take him in the library."

Tony went first, prodded by Collin's revolver in his ribs. Fanchon followed closely, turning on the lights as she went. In the big booklined room Collin indicated a straight chair. He said briefly, looking at Fanchon:

"Strong cord in the desk drawer. Get it for me will you?" And call Jamieson."

No," she said, "better not. If you'll do what is necessary, I'll—I'll keep him covered. I promise," she said bitterly as she saw the look of mingled distrust and question in Collin's eyes.

EXPLAINS EVERYTHING

By the time Jennie joined them it had been done. Tony sat as easily as possible on the straight backed chair, his hands and arms tied behind him, his legs lashed to the rungs. Collin sat in an easy chair opposite, the gun steady. Fanchon in her plain tweed frock stood against the desk. Her eyes were dark in a perfectly white face. Only her lips lived.

Jennie came in and sat down by Collin. He gave her a reassuring glance.

"If you are not Evelyn Howard," asked Jennie evenly of Fanchon, "where is she?"

I thought," said Fanchon as evenly, "that she was dead. In the accident. But he"—she indicated Tony—"says she is not. That she is with him. Mentally a child."

"My God!" exclaimed Collin low.

Jennie said: "Wait." Her lips shook. She turned to Fanchon. There was no expression in her eyes. Only a great bewilderment. She said:

"I've loved you very much. Somehow we still do. Will you tell us everything now . . . as briefly as possible, as truthfully."

Fanchon had an impulse to cast herself on her knees beside that still waiting figure. She clenched her hands on the desk. The knuckles were white. She leaned against the desk. She said:

"Yes."

She told them, low, almost in a monotone. The entire story. Who she was. How and why she had left Hawaii for San Francisco, meeting Evelyn Howard en route. How she had met Tony . . . in the library. How she had gone on seeing him, caring for him romantically, as an inexperienced girl cares . . . and how she had found out who he was and what was his means of livelihood.

A lethal business. How there had been a murder, and headlines in the papers. How she had been hunted by police and press and how Tony, learning of a vacancy in the chartered plane, had given her money, and had reserved her flight passage for her under the name of Miss Smith. And how, here again she had encountered Evelyn.

She spoke of all Evelyn had told her; she spoke, in dry phrases of her own envy and despair of their own likeness in coloring and height of the photograph taken of them together on the boat. She spoke of telling Evelyn her own story, that stop overnight in the little hotel, and briefly of how Evelyn had refused help saying her aunt could not "afford" to help.

"She was quite right, of course," said Fanchon at that point. She told of the second flight of the accident. Her voice roughened and was dark with horror. Her listeners, Jennie Carstairs and her son, shuddered with her. And Jennie's eyes were soft with an understanding compassion.

They are wearing new uniforms and greatcoats; their boots are watertight and fit well; their rifles are good and their pouches full of ammunition. They are all fresh and unused.

Compared to these fellows we are a perfect band of robbers. Our uniforms are bleached with the mud of years, with the taste of the Argonne, the chalk of Champagne, the fog valleys of Flanders, our greatcoats ragged and torn by barbed wire, shell splinters and shrapnel, cobbled with crude stitches, stiff with clay and in some instances even with blood; our boots broken, our rifles worn out, our ammunition almost at an end; we are all of us dirty, all alike gone to wreck, all weary. The war has passed over us like a steam roller.

Yet more troops gather around us. The square is filled with curious eyes.

We stand in a corner grouped about our wounded men, not because we are afraid, but because we belong together. The Americans nudge one another and point at our old, worn-out gear. One of them offers Breyer a piece of white bread, but though hunger is apparent in his eyes, he does not take it.

With a sudden ejaculation one of them points to the bandages on our wounded. These are of crepe paper, made fast with pack thread. They all have a look, then retire and whisper together. Then friendly faces are full of sympathy as they see that we have not even muslin bandages.

The man who first addressed us now puts a hand on Bethke's shoulder. "Deutsche, gute Soldat," he says, "brave Soldat."

The others nod emphatically.

We make no answer. We are not yet able to answer. The last weeks have tried us bitterly. We had to return again and again to the battle, losing our men to no purpose, yet we made no protest; we did as we have always done, and at the end our company had 32 men left of 200. So we came out from it, thinking no more feeling no more than that we had faithfully done what had been laid upon us to do.

READY TO FIGHT AGAIN

But now, under the pitying eyes of these Americans, we perceive how much in vain it has all been. The sight of their interminable, well-equipped columns reveals to us against what hopeless odds in man power and material we made our stand.

We bite our lips and look at each other. Bethke withdraws his shoulder from under the American's hand. Kosole stares ahead into vacancy. Ludwig Breyer draws himself up, we grip our rifles more firmly; we brace our knees, our eyes become harder and our gaze does not falter. We look back once more over the country whence we have come; our faces become tight with suppressed emotion and once again the fearing memory passes through us, all we have done, all we have suffered, and all that we have left behind.

We do not know what is the matter with us, but if a bitter word were now loosed against us, it would sting us to fury, and whether we wanted to or not we would burst forward, wild and breathless, mad and lost to fight, in spite of everything, to fight again.

DAILY SHORT STORY

By Faith Baldwin

Four Letters

(All names of characters in this story are fictitious.)

Man's Falsehoods Result in Broken Engagement

L-O-V-E.

He turned and loked at Wanda Carlton who sat beside him on the little private beach.

"That to you, my dear!" he said.

"As if you meant it!"

"But I do Wanda!"

The girl sighed happily.

"I can't believe it, Eddie."

He hugged her and kissed her. She clung to him for a moment.

"Someone will see us from the house," she warned, pushing him gently from her.

"Let them," he said.

"But it would make your uncle sore, Eddie. You say he's awfully strict with you."

"I'll say he is. He thinks I'm just a kid and because he got disappointed in love years ago and hates women, he thinks I ought to hate them, too."

"And you just don't hate them, do you, quite?"

Wanda's eyes winked mischievously.

"Of course not. I like women but there's one exception, you."

"Me?"

"Yes. I don't like you. I love you."

"It's wonderful," Wanda murmured.

TO INHERIT FORTUNE

"You are wonderful, Wanda, wonderful and sweet and beautiful and we're going to be happy always. It will only be a year more and I'll come into my fortune. If it hadn't been for Uncle Blake I'd have got my fortune like any other man at 21. He made Aunt Rose give me just an income until I was 30.

"And we'll be married on your thirtieth birthday, won't we, Eddie?"

"On my thirtieth birthday that's a few days less than a year from now. Do you know, I hated like the devil to come down here to Uncle Blake's place. I did it to please the old boy—think what I would have missed if I hadn't come. I wouldn't have met you!"

"And I wouldn't have met you, Eddie!"

Wanda looked at her wrist watch.

"Oh, it's nearly two and I have to be at the desk at two-fifteen," she cried.

"That's easy. I can make it across the cove in five minutes."

They walked over to the Cross-by landing. Peters, who operated the speed boat, tipped his cap with his fingers as Wayne tenderly helped Wanda into the craft.

"Hotel landing, Peters."

"Yes, sir."

The speedboat headed for the Crescent Hotel landing. Eddie and Wanda snuggled down back of Peters, arms about each other.

"I'll be over at nine, dearest," he told her.

BACK AT WORK

"We'll go places, how about the Coral Jug?"

"That's awfully late, Eddie. I don't know as I should go. I haven't the dress."

"Nonsense, you are so beautiful that no one looks at your dress."

The speedboat slowed up.

Five minutes later Wanda Carlton was back of the hotel cigar and newsstand where Edmund Wayne had first seen her and had made up his mind to get acquainted with her.

To Wanda it all seemed like some romance. Eddie Wayne was the nephew of Blake Crosby, the famous multi-millionaire who owned the great Moorish type palace of a summer home across the cove from the hotel. Wayne himself was to come into an immense fortune in a year, he told her. He had fallen in love with her, she was positive about this.

A year wouldn't be long. Then no more toiling behind cigar and newsstand counters to listen to the silly lines from adolescent numbies and would-be old sugar daddies.

Wayne rode back to the landing at his uncle's place and went up to the house. His uncle was pacing the south terrace.

"Who was the girl?" he asked. "Kid over at the hotel?"

"Well, watch your step. There's plenty of gossips to carry tales. Florrie's mother knows scads of women here."

"Oh, I'll watch my step, but Florrie doesn't expect me to never look at a girl, she's reasonable."

"Yes, reasonable, but not foolish. If you knew of half the messes I've had to haul you out of there, was the Vendon girl."

"Have a heart, Uncle Blake, she was a plain adventuress and framed me plenty. This kid I know is just an innocent girl."

"Innocent hell."

"I won't spoil things. I promised I'd marry Florrie and that goes."

"It better go."

"Naturally I want to marry her, you know that."

Eddie Wayne realized this but he hated to have it dinned into his ears all the time.

That night he met Wanda and took her out to the Coral Jug where she had one of the happiest evening of her life.

The orchestra played "Four Little Letters" and Eddie hummed the tune. Again he wrote out the letters L-O-V-E on the menu card and showed it to Wanda.

"Four little letters—they mean a lot, just between us, dear."

"Everything," Wanda agreed.

And thus, whenever possible Wanda was with Freddie Wayne during the next three weeks.

Then Florrie Winters and her mother arrived and took the costliest suite in the hotel. They had their own servants, three big cars were driven down—they came on their yacht—and everyone in the big hotel soon realized that they were the most wealthy and prominent of the Winter resorters down there.

Eddie Wayne came over to the hotel to see Florrie. Wanda saw him now and then that afternoon. He had dinner with Florrie and her mother, and then stopped at the cigar stand.

"See you tomorrow at nine at the Pavilion," he whispered.

Wanda smiled then and was happy again.

The next night he told her that Miss Winters was a relative.

"I have to be nice to her. Her mother's about the one woman my uncle has any use for."

VISITS FLORRIE

This was quite all right, Wanda thought. She and Eddie had some dances and then drove down to Three Palms, a rather notorious place that catered to a fast crowd. They had some moonlight bathing, did a lot of petting on the rear terrace, that was screened in, and it was late when Eddie took Wanda back.

"You won't mind about Florrie, dear, a chap has to be nice to his relatives."

"Of course not."

"Remember those four little letters. I mean it. I sure love you."

Several times each week Wanda went out with Eddie.

One day as Wanda was back of the newsstand she saw Mrs. Olmstead and Mrs. Winters stop at the stand. They asked for a back number magazine. Wanda, searching beneath the counter for it, heard Mrs. Olmstead say, "She's the girl Mr. Wayne's been makin' love to her for months they go to rather awful places together."

Wanda found the magazine. A little later Wanda saw Mrs. Winters and her daughter, Florence, walk past her counter. Florrie stared at her as her mother nudged her and whispered. Wanda began to worry. But she had another surprise a few hours later.

"Your boy friend," Nell Hinkley said to Wanda, "is shot with luck. He's gonna marry the rich Florrie Winters."

Nell relieved Wanda at the cigar counter. She showed Wanda an item in the society column of a local newspaper announcing the engagement of Wayne and Miss Winters.

Things happened rapidly. Florrie Winters herself intercepted Wanda as she was leaving.

"Come out and ride with me, Miss Carlton. I want to talk with you," she said.

Wanda was quite ready to have it out.

They were driven along the south shore road for a considerable distance.

"Have you any claim on Mr. Wayne, my dear?" Florrie asked.

"Is it true that you are going to marry him?" Wanda demanded.

"Not if you have any claim on him."

"He wants to marry me next year, when he comes into his fortune and can do it without being afraid of his cross old uncle," Wanda said, honestly enough.

"He's not coming into any fortune, dear. He lives on his uncle's charity. Mother thinks I ought to marry him but I'm not keen on it. He's been in so many scrapes. Are you sure you have no claim on him? I mean, should he marry you?"

"Of course not! Do you think I'm—"

Wanda choked with indignation.

"I'm glad, dear. Now I'll tell you a secret. I've had detectives working for more than a year. He's absolutely no good. Mother had that engagement announcement sent to the paper. Wait until she sees the detectives report about him. How terrible he has been, the bad women who have made a fool of him and the silly girls he has ruined. Will you take a note to him tonight? It will be from me, telling him I know all about him and never wanted to marry him. Then, if you still want him—"

GIVEN NOTE

"Want him! Oh, Miss Winters!"

"You are a sweet and a wise little girl, Miss Carlton."

"I'll take the note," Wanda promised.

The next evening at the artificially lighted beach at the Three Palms rendezvous, Eddie and Wanda sat side by side.

"Love," Eddie wrote in the sand with his cane.

"Four little letters," he whispered.

"Oh, that reminds me, Eddie, there's a note for you," Wanda said.

She picked up his cane as he was opening the note. She erased the love in the sand with a scrape of the cane. She made four other little letters in the sand.

Eddie Wayne had a good poker face. He crumpled the letter after he had read it and put it in his pocket. Wanda had seen it and knew its contents.

"Look," Wanda said, "four little letters, from me to you!"

Eddie Wayne looked on the sand and saw:

P-A-I-D.

New York apartments are being equipped with slot machines which vend eggs, milk, cream, cheese, potatoes and canned goods.

And the next logical step will be to pipe ginger ale right to the kitchen sinks.

Of course there is no gambling aspect to the apartment house slot machines—aside from the gamble on the eggs.

Congressman Frisby has been working far into the night lately without sleep or rest, relying on his iron nerve to bring him through. "Now I am ready to show the fruits of my long vigil," he said yesterday. "I have a picked squad—hand picked, I might say—of young ladies whom I have trained carefully. They will be stationed at busy corners and dangerous intersections to direct traffic, with an appeal and a freshness that the average male officer cannot have. And keep his job. At any rate, I am content to say that I have done my best with them." Above is the new stop position selected by Frisby out of thousands as being graceful and yet commanding.

BE A PITTSBURGH BOOSTER
To Your Friends in Other Cities

Racketeers' Candidate

The Criminal Element and the Gang Politicians Are for Andrew T. Park for District Attorney

The most terrible menace to the safety and welfare of the people of Allegheny County is the alliance between the criminal racketeers and the corrupt Republican machine. The one official on whom the people must depend, more than any other, to smash the alliance and put the racketeers and corrupt politicians in the penitentiary is the District Attorney.

The racketeers and the corrupt politicians have flourished under District Attorney Andrew T. Park and they expect to continue to flourish if he is successful in his ambition to be elected for another term. That is why the criminal element and the political gangsters are supporting Park so enthusiastically.

Mayor Kline, indicted for malfeasance, though not through Park's efforts—is strong for Park and has instructed the city employes to vote for him. The District Attorney has kindly postponed the trial to an indefinite date, and Kline has little fear of the prosecution. He has good reason to be optimistic.

District Attorney Park is a friend and protege of Senator James J. Coyne, who has publicly said—and that without drawing a rebuke from Park—that the jury will acquit Mayor Kline without leaving the box. This is the same Coyne, by the way, who, when questioned by the federal income tax authorities about bank deposits amounting to hundreds of thousands of dollars, declined to answer on the ground that he might incriminate himself.

Kline and Coyne are strong for Park, and so is John Volpe, of Wilmerding, the Al Capone of the eastern part of the county. Volpe has repeatedly been a defendant in Criminal Court on murder and other charges. Generally he has been acquitted, but he publicly admitted being in the liquor racket when he pleaded guilty in Federal Court several years ago to charges of possessing large quantities of whiskey and maintaining a common nuisance.

Park used to prosecute Volpe and to speak forcibly about him. In recent years, however, he has not only not pressed charges against the racketeer, but has even become quite friendly with him—so friendly indeed that he attended a meeting in Wilmerding one Sunday not long ago at which Volpe presided, and in which Volpe's brother James, an ex-convict, participated.

It is no wonder then that scores of racket murders that have occurred in Allegheny County during District Attorney Park's tenure of the office have gone unpunished, no wonder that virtually nothing has been done by him to stop Kline's Police Court magistrates' illegal practice of licensing bootleggers, professional gamblers and operators of vice resorts by letting them off with light fines, no wonder that grafting officials have escaped prosecution.

District Attorney Park makes public statements now and then about prosecuting election cheaters, but the crooks hold his threats in so little fear that they have prepared to steal the Republican nominations next Tuesday by the perpetration of the most extensive frauds ever attempted. It is estimated that an effort will be made to cast 50,000 illegal votes for Park and other candidates of the Republican machine.

While Park makes threats now and then against election thieves he never shows the slightest interest in the malfeasance of public officials. Charges of the gravest character, with names and dates and figures given, have been preferred during the present campaign by responsible citizens against some of the officials, and prominently published in the papers. But Park has remained indifferent.

Many persons still have confidence in District Attorney Park because of his fine family background and engaging personality. There is no denying that he is a very likable person. But that makes him all the more dangerous. Moreover, his fine background makes his neglect of his duty all the more reprehensible. If he had been brought up in the slums and had always been in familiar association with the criminal element there would be more excuse for him.

Not a few reputable businessmen and attorneys are supporting Park. He has won the allegiance, too, of certain social workers whose hearts have been won by the kindly interest he has shown in some of their cases of juvenile delinquency. The Sun-Telegraph feels nevertheless that Park is not sufficiently alert to the public interest, that he lacks initiative and is not aggressive enough, and that his election for another term would be a misfortune.

His opponent for the nomination, Ralph H. Smith, the Independent Republican candidate, has talked well during the campaign, and it is to be hoped his brave words will be followed, in the event of his election, by energetic action. There is a tremendous house-cleaning job awaiting a forceful District Attorney, and Smith has shown full appreciation of the responsibilities of the office.

Ralph Smith has had experience in the prosecutor's office, as Assistant District Attorney, as Assistant United States Attorney and as Deputy State Attorney General. About the only criticism that has been made of his fitness for the office is that he is too young. But he is 32, and William Pitt became Prime Minister of England and Napoleon won many of his great victories at a much earlier age.

Another candidate on the Independent Republi- can ticket who merits the voters' support is Joseph N. Mackrell, seeking another term as Register of Wills. Mackrell, by the way, stays perennially young. He studied law and was admitted to the bar a few years ago at an age when most men would regard the hard study involved as a task beyond their strength. Mackrell has given the public good service as Register.

Exciting developments are coming so thick and fast in the campaign that it is necessary to follow the guidance of experts to understand their significance. Mark Shields has access to many sources of information, and is a skillful interpreter of the meaning of the various moves made by the political strategists. His review of the campaign in the Sunday Sun-Telegraph will be well worth your attention.

The American Weekly magazine section of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph will also prove interesting. And you will want, of course, to see the Gravure Section with its reproduction in full colors of the paintings "Bound for George's Bay" by Harry A. Vincent and "The Leghorn Hat" by Julius Rolshoven, its "Remember?" department and the prize winning pictures in the amateur photograph contest.

Slackers!

By Nelson Harding

These slackers' dollars, held too tight
By fear, will not come out and fight
When by Depression we're attacked,
But like some wartime cowards act,

Reluctant money should enlist
And with its active work assist
The drive against adversity
And hasten final Victory.

To Guard Against The Dole

By Claude G. Bowers

The Labor Day addresses and expressions may be divided into parts. One, those of the cheerful optimist, incapable of seeing that the present depression goes deeper than any we have ever had before; and those who face realities. The former are the representatives of the federal administration which looks about and can find no Armenian or Belgian children among us asking for bread. Mr. Doak, the Labor member of the cabinet, whose agility was illustrated in the flip-flop he took on the Wagner bill, goes to the administration's phonograph case and puts on the old familiar record "Prosperity Is Just Around the Corner." He knows better. The President knows better. The administration from top to bottom knows better.

And Mr. Doak makes a serious strategical blunder. When impossible to get down to cases, it is best to resort to generalities. "Prosperity is hurrying home"—he should have said something of the sort and resumed his seat. It was in his enumeration of what the administration is doing for the millions that are jobless and hungry that Mr. Doak is pitiful.

Then Mark Sullivan, minister without portfolio, finds signs of returning prosperity. People's shoes are wearing out and they will be forced to buy new shoes; and that will put men to work. Just how the jobless are to get the money to buy the shoes is one of the undivulged secrets of the administration.

Sees Our Social System at Stake

Those who faced the facts had one common message—that the unemployed who want to work must be put to work or fed, housed and clothed with the positive aid of the federal government. Even John L. Lewis, of the United Mine Workers, a persistent apologist of the administration, is finally forced to sing another tune. Even he now sees that upon the speedy solution of the present problem rests the preservation of our social system. Even he now says:

"Mass production will not be permitted to permanently level the masses to want and poverty if the American workingmen unite against such a pitfall."

Significant Notes in Labor Day Speeches

But the most significant note struck in these addresses was one of protest against the ballyhoo about the dole. No one wants a dole—least of all, the men in breadlines. England did not want the dole—but it meant dole or revolution there. And William Green, of the American Federation of Labor does not want the dole—either from the government or private charity.

But he serves notice:

"The antidote for the dole is work. There must be either work or a dole in some form. Which shall it be?"

And Senator Wagner says:

"I am weary of the pretense which shouts opposition to the dole and in actual practice fails to make adequate provision for jobs and would limit its efforts during the coming winter to the stimulation of local and private doles."

And Senator Borah says:

"If the public dole system is established in this country, it will be forced by those who, having the means, refuse to do their part in feeding the hungry."

And if they fail, he foreshadows possible events in Washington this winter when he said:

"If the wealth of the country does not voluntarily contribute to the end that we may take care of them, there is only one thing to do, and that is to feed those people from the Treasury of the United States and increase the income tax, particularly in the higher brackets, to enable us to do it."

There was an abundance of warning in the speeches on Labor Day.

If Not a Dole, Then Work for the Jobless

But no one wants a dole—either federal or private. The self-respecting workingman without a job wants no "hand out" in a breadline; he wants an opportunity to work and earn his bread.

That work must be furnished by private industry or by government and the national administration is still included in "Government." Hungry men are not nourished on the good will of the administration; and cities and counties, struggling to feed the jobless, may need the material aid of the Nation's government—not its "co-ordinating" gesture.

Thus Senator Wagner demands from the federal government a fund of $2,000,000,000 to furnish work; and Mr. Hearst would make it two and a half times more.

If not a dole—then work for the jobless.

Demand a Five Day Week, Shorter Working Hours

And there was another, more constructive, message sent to Washington by labor leaders who want neither doles nor Communism. Mr. Green demands the employment stabilization legislation proposed by Wagner and opposed by Mr. Hoover. And labor generally demands that the menace to their jobs in machinery be met with a five-day week and a shorter working day. And that industrial leaders get together and work out a constructive plan for that rehabilitation of our industrial system which is essential to its preservation.

If Mr. Hoover believes in the virtue of "co-ordinating" things, let him respect the plea of labor and call the leaders of industry and labor together in a conference to work out a common plan.

That plea has been denied. When the bankers, with heavy investments of money in Germany, found that country on a verge of a collapse and Dwight Morrow and others demanded immediate action, the administration moved with a celerity of which it had been thought incapable. The two leading members of the cabinet rushed to Europe. A financial sacrifice was made by the government. And no one seriously complained. No one wanted our money investments to be lost.

But now labor is asking for action—for a conference, for a program—and is denied. The reason constitutes a damning indictment of the administration in these times: it is more interested in money than in men.

If property rights and interests are all that concern the administration we submit for its consideration this thought from the head of organized labor in America:

"The ownership of a job is as sacred as the ownership of property. The worker must be made as secure in the enjoyment of his right to work as the stockholder is in the enjoyment of his right to own property."

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Mrs. Solomon Says—

Alas, my daughter, now cometh the winter of our discontent and the autumn of our disenchantment.

* * *

Lo, now, doth the Summer Damsel return to the city, and behold her "Hero" of the Beach in a new and revealing light. And Cinderella, at midnight, was no more astonished at the fading of her dreams.

For he that appeared SO fascinating under the light of summer moon showeth up as but a tired Business Man in a ready-made suit.

He, whom she "understood so well," after three days beside the sad sea waves, now appeareth a total stranger in a city drawing-room.

He that babbled sweet nothings beneath the stars, and talked so glibly of love in a canoe, now mumbleth of the weather and twiddleth his thumbs and shuffleth his feet when he sitteth at a tea table.

* * *

He that appeared a Sheik in white flannels and a glorious Son of Nature in a bathing suit now resembleth a butcher's delivery boy in tweeds and a clothing store dummy in evening clothes.

For, verily, verily, there is a dangerous magic in the air of a summer resort, which maketh the moonlight in a man's eyes to resemble the lovelight, and a crooked profile to appear pure Grecian, and a half-portion lightweight to appear stalwart and heroic.

But a youth that could clasp a damsel in his arms with dramatic fervor where the background was all scenery, may prove but a false alarm against a drawing-room set.

And his golden silences and silvery speeches may seem but pure "brass" in the new perspective.

Go to! The damsel that taketh her HEART to a summer resort deserveth to get moths therein. For, summer love, like unto summer frocks, appeareth strangely faded and tawdry in the cold gray light of a September morn.

Yea, verily, it is a strong and hardy summer romance that surviveth until Christmas, and a fervid flame that doth not flicker out in the first cool wind of autumn.

For a summer resort is a place where a damsel will resort to ANYTHING for devotion, and a man will resort to anything for diversion.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—All summer I've been trying to run down to Great Neck to see Gene Buck. Today I did. There is always a sprinkle of celebrities pattering in at Gene's. Donald Brian, Dennis King, Arthur Hopkins, Sam Harris, Ed Wynn, Charlie King and actor folk like that live hard by.

Buck's home is the former estate of a sugar magnate. Ring Lardner calls the drawing room "a dirty dig at the Yale Bowl." Eight huge divans scattered about are almost lost, which gives an idea. Aside from the flow of high spirited persiflage, the bathing beach is two blocks away.

Then, too, there are wide verandas, a solarium, croquet, putting green and an exquisite rose garden. Certainly it would be difficult to find a more superb spot for a day's outing. But I just don't fit in with such suburban delights. I'm not the "teep."

I did kick around in the surf awhile, dropped around the corner to see the widow of the beloved "Tad," did a little sloppy putting, tucked away a whopping lunch and should have been satisfied to sneak off to the sun parlor for a nice nap.

But just about this time Gene's gardener came back from town on a motorcycle. I suppose it is a throw back to bicycle days, but every time I see a motorcycle I am obsessed with a notion to ride it. All the rest of the guests were enjoying a siesta and this was my chance.

I asked the gardener if he minded if I "took a spin around the block." He was not only strong for it, but showed me how to manipulate a few of the gadgets I did not understand. It looked simple enough, so I swung into the saddle, fiddled with the whopple-choke, or whatever it is, and away.

Circling the estate I returned jauntily enough to find my wife had joined the gardener and as I drew up heard her shriek: "Get that idiot off that crazy thing. He can't even turn on an electric light without blowing out the fuse."

That immediately aroused the old McIntyre mettle. Tossing her a withering glance, I pressed some go-go hoodus and swish, pop-pop-pop the thing gave a broncho lurch and shot off like greased lightning. Fences, trees and houses flattened out and I opened my mouth to yell "Help" and swallowed about six quarts of air. Something had to be done quickly, for there was a sharp turn ahead. I yanked and twisted at everything in sight and with beginner's luck did something that made the machine slow down.

'Twas a narrow squeak and I made a mental note then and there that motorcycling was off my list from hence on. Slowly turning around and as slowly moseying back I found that my wife, in white faced alarm, had aroused the entire house and brought them out on the lawn. As I drew near I yelled jeeringly: "I suppose you thought I hadn't enough mechanical sense to run a silly old motorcycle." Then I reached to shut off the juice and dismount and swish, pop, pop, double-pop I was off again, hell for election.

The start was with such a swift jerk that when my hat flew off I thought, "Ah, Ah, there goes the old bean!" Scenery flattened out again and telephone poles suggested a picket fence. This was the end. I couldn't have enough more fool luck to stop, but in desperation kept jiggling the whatnots and again it slowed down. But I had no notion whatever how to bring it to a complete stop. One thing certain, I wasn't going back to the house until I could stop dead.

So I turned into what looked like the Main Street of Great Neck. As long as I didn't touch any of the dinguses I could run slow like this and be just dandy. About three blocks away—and was I glad?—a motorcycle cop round the corner, I rode along side and in a pop-eyed stutter explained: "Officer, I'm in a terrible fix. I can't stop. Every time I try"—and I reached to illustrate. And swish, pop, pop, pop, there I was flying again. He sped after me yelling something in the wind that sounded like "Wampf, wampf, oobie oobie wampf!"

* * *

I was heading for the open country and probably the Rocky Mountains when there was a despairing rattle and the motor, for no reason, stopped. It's all pretty silly, but for days I'll be afraid to turn anything—even a faucet or doorknob—for fear it will swish, pop, pop, pop and I'll be off again.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

I hate to be forgiven.

I try never to forgive others.

And this is not because I'm cold-hearted or indifferent to the interests of others. Indeed, I covet their good opinion. But I don't believe in this Forgiveness Racket . . . and I do not think that forgiveness promotes Peace and Good Will. To the contrary, I believe that most forgiveness is snooty impertinence and does far more harm than good.

Of course, I can't express this to those who insist on forgiving me. I've got to take it and act pretty . . . pretend I'm eager and grateful. But, actually, I'm anything but. Inwardly, I'm squirming with humiliation and resentment . . . and dead sure that the other fellow is grabbing off a halo at my expense.

For what right has one, cussed human being to "forgive" another cussed human being? Isn't the forgiver, at heart, just as ornery as the forgiven? He is. Then how dare he sit in judgment and dispense mercy?

There is only One who is fit to forgive and He isn't making any fuss about it. As for the rest of us, it is as though a caterpillar condescended to a worm.

Then, if I don't want forgiveness, what do I want?

I want UNDERSTANDING.

I want the one whom I have harmed to look into my heart and see why I did this thing—

I want him to compare my weakness with his own weakness . . . . .

And to take a chance on my strength as he'd take a chance on his own strength . . . . .

I want him to respect me, even though I've been a darned fool, as he, himself, would want to be respected, even though he had been a darned fool.

In short, I want to be treated as a spunky equal, not as a snivelling, spineless sinner.

For, unless he does treat me with respect, what good does our reconciliation do? Forgiveness is bad for us both. It makes him feel like a tin saint and me like a plugged nickel. If he forgives me, he secretly feels that he has the bulge on me. If I am forgiven, I am secretly yearning to get the bulge on him. So, even while we're sweet-kissing each other, we are getting ready for a future brawl.

But if the man I have harmed will treat me as an equal, if he'll trust and help me because he's in the same boat, then I'll give everything I have to justify his faith in me.

"But there are people you can't treat as equals, people you dare not trust because they'll just keep on doing spiteful things—"

There are indeed. And there's just one wise way to deal with such people — LEAVE THEM ALONE. Give them every sporting chance until you are convinced of their malice. Then fade from the picture. Don't waste your time trusting them or trying to understand them. Don't waste your energy fretting at them or brooding over your wrong or trying to get even. FORGET THEM. Put them out of your life and out of your mind.

All of which adds up to this—

And, if they aren't decent, you're just making faces at yourself.

ONCE OVERS

Often you regret that you have few intimate friends.

You have pretty positive ideas and opinions.

You wonder why so few agree with your standard of what is right.

Everyone seems out of step but you.

You think that if the others would try to make themselves over as you would have them do they might be more agreeable to you.

You never think of making any changes in your own taste or conduct.

If you cannot find those who meet your pattern you will not accept them on a close friendly basis.

Perhaps these people are as firm in their belief that you could be improved if you would accept some of their views.

You are selfish to the extent that the one you would like most would be the one who considered you most perfect, or who would accept you with all your faults.

You want praise and deference in all you do.

Others are as deserving but you fail to appreciate that fact.

The person who will O. K. everything you do would be hard to find.

You do and say many things which are not favored by even those who like you.
